it has relevance for all disciplines yet is often dismissed as a niche market or someone else's domain. This collection explores how academic avoidance of disability studies and disability theory is indicative of social prejudice and highlights conversely how the academy can and does engage with disability studies. This innovative book brings together work in the humanities and the social sciences and draws on the riches of cultural diversity to challenge institutional and disciplinary avoidance. Divided into three parts, the first looks at how educational institutions and systems implicitly uphold double standards which can result in negative experiences for staff and students who are disabled. The second part explores how disability studies informs and improves a number of academic disciplines from social work to performance arts. The final part shows how more diverse cultural engagement offers a way forward for the academy, demonstrating ways in which we can make more explicit the interdisciplinary significance of disability studies and by extension disability theory, activism, experience, and culture.

Disability Avoidance and the Academy: Challenging Resistance will interest students and scholars of disability studies, education studies, and cultural studies. Health Matters Eric Mykhalovskiy, Jacqueline Choiniere, Pat Armstrong, Hugh Armstrong, 2020-05-12. In Health Matters, contributors from a range of disciplinary and interdisciplinary traditions address multiple dimensions of health care such as nursing, midwifery, home care, pharmaceuticals, medical education, and palliative care. Through their explorations, the book poses questions about the role that the forms of expertise associated with evidence-based health care play in shaping how we understand and organize health services. Authors critique instrumental managerial ways of knowing health care and focus on how such ways of knowing limit our understandings of and responses to health care problems and are linked with the growing commodification, individualization, and privatization of Canadian health services. Working with analytic perspectives such as feminism, Marxist political economy, critical ethnography, science and technology studies, governmentality studies, and institutional ethnography, the volume demonstrates how critical social science perspectives contribute alternative perspectives about what counts as health care problems and how to best to address them.
