Burton, 2017-11-23 Excerpt from Photographic Optics A Text Book for the Professional and Amateur To take a practical and familiar example we place in the fire box of the boiler attached to the engine of a steam crane a certain quantity of coal This coal contains a vast amount of energy in the potential or latent form not making itself apparent to any of our senses but requiring only that certain conditions will be fulfilled when the potential energy will be changed with various other forms The conditions are the presence of oxygen with which the carbon and hydrogen of the coal may combine and generally some internal stimulus to start the combination In plain language the fire of coals wants air And requires to be lighted We now immediately have energy exhibited in two forms light and heat A certain amount of light will probably escape by the furnace door and possibly by the chimney About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing
