Surprise has always been an element of warfare but the return of great power competition and the high level threat that it poses gives urgency to thinking about surprise now Because the future is highly uncertain and great powers have not fought each other for over 70 years surprise is highly likely in a future great power conflict This study therefore examines potential surprises in a great power conflict particularly in a conflict s initial stages when the interaction of adversaries technologies prewar plans and military doctrines first becomes manifest It is not an attempt to project the future Rather it seeks to do the opposite explore the range of possible future conflicts to see where surprises might lurk
