New Methods in Reading Comprehension Research David E. Kieras, Marcel A. Just, 2018-04-17 Published in 1984 this volume presents methodologies for studying the ongoing psychological processes that occur as a person reads a text as well as discussing the major findings that these methodologies have produced to provide a handbook of reading comprehension research techniques Focusing on the comprehension processes that occur when a person is reading rather than the representation that remains after the text has been read the methodologies use measures such as reading times that reflect ongoing processes rather than relying exclusively on conventional measures of memory performance such as recall These methods make use of computer technology for rapid and flexible stimulus representation and data acquisition This book will allow researchers and students to select appropriate methodologies to investigate a range of fascinating questions about reading comprehension

Neuronal Plasticity: Building a Bridge from the Laboratory to the Clinic Jordan Grafman, 2012-12-06 Over the last twenty years there has been an explosive growth in our understanding of the molecular cellular and anatomical changes that occur in the days and weeks following brain injury It is now clear that training and exposure to certain environments can modify and shape neuronal plasticity in lower animals and humans In humans in particular there are new ways of charting neuronal plasticity at the ensemble or regional level using functional neuroimaging techniques such as positron emission tomography and functional magnetic resonance imaging Thus the time seems right for transporting the laboratory results to the clinic so that experimental findings can be tested in the field This volume provides some impetus to moving the field of cognitive neuroscience a little further in its efforts to improve the lives of patients who have suffered a debilitating brain injury
