overview of the analytical frameworks and theoretical concepts that feminist theorists have developed to analyze the known world. Featuring leading feminist theorists from diverse regions of the globe, this collection delves into forty-nine subject areas demonstrating the complexity of feminist challenges to established knowledge while also engaging areas of contestation within feminist theory. Demonstrating the interdisciplinary nature of feminist theory, the chapters offer innovative analyses of topics central to social and political science, cultural studies, and humanities discourses associated with medicine and science and issues in contemporary critical theory that have been transformed through feminist theorization. The handbook identifies limitations of key epistemic assumptions that inform traditional scholarship and shows how theorizing from women's and men's lives has profound effects on the conceptualization of central categories, whether the field of analysis is aesthetics, biology, cultural studies, development, economics, film studies, health, history, literature, politics, religion, science studies, sexualities, violence, or war.

The Rise and Fall of National Women's Hospital Linda Bryder, 2014-04-01 In this major history, Linda Bryder traces the annals of National Women's Hospital over half a century in order to tell a wider story of reproductive health. She uses the varying perspectives of doctors, nurses, midwives, consumer groups, and patients to show how together their dialog shaped the nature of motherhood and women's health in 20th-century New Zealand. Natural childbirth and rooming-in, artificial insemination and in vitro fertilization, sterilization and abortion: women's health and reproduction went through a revolution in the 20th century as scientific advances confronted ethical and political dilemmas. In New Zealand, the major site for this revolution was National Women's Hospital, established in Auckland in 1946 with a purpose-built building that opened in 1964. National Women's was the home of medical breakthroughs, scandals. This chronicle covers them all.

Recreating Motherhood Barbara Katz Rothman, 2000 Selling genetically gifted human eggs on the free market for a hefty price. In vitro fertilization. Fetal rights. Prenatal diagnosis. Surrogacy. All are instances of biomedical and social advancements with which we have become familiar in recent years. Yet these issues are often regarded as distinct or only loosely related under the rubric of reproduction. Barbara Katz Rothman demonstrates how they form a complex whole that demands of us in response a woman-centered, class-sensitive way of understanding motherhood. We need a social policy for dealing with mothers and motherhood that is consistent with feminist politics and feminist theory. Her book shows how we as a society must first recognize that the real needs of mother, father, and children have been swept aside in an attempt to reduce the complex process of human reproduction to a clinical event that can be controlled by medical technology. Rothman suggests ways to accomplish social and legal change that would allow technological advances to affirm motherhood and the mother-child relationship without cost to women's identity. This new edition of Recreating Motherhood contains exciting updates. Rothman shows how this material is key in understanding the family, not just motherhood. And a new chapter, Reflections on a Decade, explores how new reproductive technologies combine with new marketing and new genetics to pose troubling social questions.

Cultural Technologies Within a Technological

Culture Christian Papilloud, Kornelia Hahn, 2008 While there is already a huge research literature marked by the sociology of technology the analyses gathered in this volume try to go beyond classical sociological approaches Rather the idea is that crossing traditional boundaries will lead to new results when it comes to understanding the effects of technologies This idea is based on the assumption that the implementation of technology in daily life is no longer directly associated with binaries such as technology nature object subject alienated and creative activities social determination and self determination material culture and social practices or interactive communication and mediated communication In fact technology gains social relevance as it is uniquely embedded into cultural practices So far this argument holds especially true for analyses within the sociology of culture ethnomethodology and related fields While these fields have primarily dealt with old technologies like communication skills body performances or trained craftsmanship their fundamental argument should be extended to the more advanced technologies and to the use of latest high tech A Seat at the Table Hettie V.
