Schmitt, 2006-11-22 Knowledge from Plato onwards has been considered in relation to justified belief Current debate has centred around the nature of the justification and whether justified belief can be considered an internal or external matter Epistemological internalists argue that the subject must be able to reflect upon a belief to complete the process of justification The externalists on the other hand claim that it is only necessary to consider whether the belief is reliably formed and argue that the ability to know by reflection is not required for a justified belief In the historical section of this book the three most important epistemologists Plato Descartes and Hume as well as the ancient epistemologies of the stoics Academics and Pyrrhonians are considered In reconsidering the history of epistemology the author is led to argue against the view that internalism is historically dominant His critique of internalism is then developed into a sustained argument against many of its forms and he goes on to defend an externalist reliabilist epistemology circulated by practitioners of Daoist Buddhist Confucian and other self cultivational disciplines Working through a wide range of scriptures essays treatises biographies commentaries fictive dialogues diary records interpretive keys and ritual instructions Campany uncovers a set of discrete paradigms by which dreams were viewed and responded to by practitioners He shows how these paradigms underlay texts of diverse religious and ideological persuasions that are usually treated in mutual isolation The result is a provocative meditation on the relationship between individuals nocturnal experiences and one culture s persistent attempts to discipline interpret and incorporate them into waking practice
