The Fourth 'R' Veronica King, 2004 A multifaceted approach seemed appropriate for this study the purpose of which was to investigate the teaching of Catholic Religious Education in Early Years The methodology used was eclectic and designed to accommodate the exploratory nature of the investigation The elements of the study consisted of activities with the children participating in the study interviews with the diocesan Re co ordinator principals teachers and parents in conjunction with questionnaires for teachers and second class pupils Other elements of the study involved surveys of classrooms and schools and data obtained from available documents and religious textbooks The results of the children s activities demonstrated that the majority of the Irish Catholic children studied have a positive attitude toward religious education The comparison of the current Irish Catholic RE programme with other programmes showed that the programme is child centred and attempts to foster children s faith Interviews with the principals teachers and parents also suggested a positive attitude toward RE on the part of the significant adults in these children s lives The children s attitudes were interpreted as potential interest waiting to be developed The study concluded that a partnership approach to Catholic religious education is now needed This partnership should include children parents teachers clergy and the local parish community and is needed to support parents in their role as primary educators of their children especially with respect to religious education Finally some recommendations are made with regard to the development of a more home and parish based religious education for young children

Global Perspectives on Spirituality and Education Jacqueline Watson, Marian de Souza, Ann Trousdale, 2013-12-04 In recent decades and around the world much attention has been given to the role of spirituality in the education of children and young people While educationalists share many common goals and values in nurturing the spiritual lives of children and young people national and regional cultures religions and politics have impacted on the approaches scholars and practitioners have adopted in their investigations and practices The different contexts across nations and regions mean that educators face quite distinct conditions in which to frame their approaches to spiritual education and research and the nature and impact of these differences is not yet understood This book brings together thinkers from around the globe and sets them the task of explaining how their research on children s spirituality and education has been shaped by the historical cultural religious and political contexts of the geographic region in which they work The book presents contributions in three sections Europe and Israel Australasia and The Americas and concludes with a chapter highlighting what is common and what is contextually unique about global approaches to spirituality and education
