Gender and Early Modern Constructions of Childhood Naomi J. Miller, Naomi Yavneh, 2016-12-05 Drawing on art history literary studies and social history the essays in this volume explore a range of intersections between gender and constructions of childhood in the 15th 16th and 17th centuries in Italy England France and Spain The essays are grouped around the themes of celebration and loss education and social training growing up and growing old Contributors grapple with ways in which constructions of childhood were inflected by considerations of gender throughout the early modern world In so doing they examine representations of children and childhood in a range of sources from the period from paintings and poetry to legal records and personal correspondence The volume sheds light on some of the ways in which in the relations between Renaissance children and their parents and peers gender mattered Gender and Early Modern Constructions of Childhood enriches our understanding of individual children and the nature of familial relations in the early modern period as well as of the relevance of gender to constructions of self and society The Digital Child Daniel Dervin, 2017-10-18 Nothing is more synonymous with the twenty first century than the image of a child on his or her smart phone tablet video game console television and or laptop But with all this external stimulation has childhood development been helped or hindered Daniel Dervin is concerned that today s childhood has become unmoored from its Rousseauist Wordsworthian anchors in nature He considers childrens development to be inextricably linked with inwardness a psychological concept referring to the awareness of ones self as derived from the world and the internalization of such reflections Inwardness is the enabling space that allows ones thoughts experiences and emotions to be processed It is an important adaptive marker of human evolution In The Digital Child Dervin traces the evolution of how we have perceived childhood in the West and thus what we have meant by inwardness from pre history to today He identifies six transformational stages tribal pedagogical religious humanist rational and citizen leading up to a new stage the digital child This stage has emerged from current unprecedented and pervasive technological culture Dervin delves deeply into each stage that precedes today s studying myths literary texts the visual arts cultural histories media reports and the traditions of parenting pediatrics and pedagogy Weaving together approaches from biology culture and psychology Dervin revisits who we once were as a species in order to enable us to grasp who we are becoming and where we might be heading for better or worse The Early Modern Italian Domestic Interior, 1400-1700 Erin J. Campbell, Stephanie R. Miller, Elizabeth Carroll Consavari, 2016-03-23 Emphasizing on the one hand the reconstruction of the material culture of specific residences and on the other the way in which particular domestic objects reflect shape and mediate family values and relationships within the home this volume offers a distinct contribution to research on the early modern Italian domestic interior Though the essays mainly take an art historical approach the book is interdisciplinary in that it considers the social implications of domestic objects for family members of different genders age and rank as well as for visitors to the home By adopting a broad chronological framework that encompasses both Renaissance and Baroque Italy and by expanding the regional scope beyond Florence and Venice to include domestic interiors from less studied centers such as Urbino Ferrara and Bologna this collection offers genuinely new perspectives on the home in early modern Italy Mona Lisa Dianne Hales, 2014-08-05 The book rests on the premise that the woman in the painting Mona Lisa is indeed the person identified in its earliest description Lisa Gherardini 1479 1542 wife of the Florence merchant Francesco del Giocondo Dianne Hales has followed facts from the

Florence State Archives to the squalid street where Mona Lisa was born to the ruins of the convent where she died affection disciplinary authority and education The most potent rhetorical aspect of fatherhood however was not as a static image or shape but rather the possibility of invoking connections between one role and another The most potent connection between roles was the idea that fathers were affectionate authorities combining power over subordinates with desire for their well being Tracing the connections and contradictions of these identities this study provides a nuanced view of concepts of fatherhood on the eve of the Reformation
