National Trust Histories The Lake District:

National Trust Histories: The Lake District Chris Bassinger, 2016-05-15 The Lake District was until the 19th century a remote neglected and inaccessible part of England Before the arrival of good road and rail networks and tourism it had been home to successive generations of very tough people prehistoric peasant farmers small Roman garrisons Norse and Saxon settlers monastic tenants and after the Dissolution of the monasteries the doughty farming families of yeomen or statesmen and communities of miners and quarry workers Each group has left its powerful imprint on the landscape and there is an exceptional legacy of prehistoric and Roman monuments interesting medieval castles and monastic buildings and a wealth of post medieval buildings in stone as well as plenty of relics to attract the industrial archaeology enthusiasts It is fitting that the Lake District should be the subject of one of the four volumes in the National Trust Histories series since the charity manages so many properties in the region and has done so much to conserve its beauty There are scores of books which delight in the loveliness of the Lake District but very few which tell the visitor in uncomplicated terms about the creation of the landscape There are also very few scholars who understand this story as well as Chris Bassinger and his account will add a new dimension to the pleasure and inspiration that so many derive from this remarkable north west corner of England

The Agrarian History of England and Wales Edward John T. Collins, Joan Thirsk, 2000 The unifying theme of this volume is the changing role of the countryside in national life and the impact upon it of the social and economic forces unleashed by industrialisation and the growth of towns

Sissinghurst: An Unfinished History Adam Nicolson, 2015-07-14 A charming portrait of an ancient and beautiful house in Kent and a poignant and amusing portrait of the English class system Simon Winchester From lavish palace for Elizabethan nobles to dreary jailhouse for eighteenth century prisoners of war from well manicured country house for a string of landed families to weed choked ruin Sissinghurst in Kent has become one of the most illustrious estates in England and its future may prove to be just as intriguing as its past In the 1930s English poet Vita Sackville West and her husband Harold Nicolson acquired land that had once been owned by Vita's ancestors Together they created elaborate gardens filled with roses apple trees vivid flowers and scenic paths lined with hedges and pink brick walls Vita a gardening correspondent for the Observer and a close friend of Virginia Woolf opened Sissinghurst to the public But the thriving working farm began to change after her death Her son Nigel instituted sweeping changes including transferring ownership of the estate to Britain's National Trust in 1967 to avoid extensive taxation For author Adam Nicolson the grandson of Harold and Vita Sissinghurst was always more than a tourist attraction it was his home As a boy Nicolson hiked the same trails that Roman conquerors walked centuries before With wistful imagination fascination with natural beauty and connection to the land Nicolson has returned home to restore Sissinghurst's glory His journey to recreate a sustainable and functioning farm despite resistance from the National Trust makes for a compelling memoir of family history and the powerful relationship between people and nature

Beastly Natures Dorothee Brantz, 2010-08-03 Although the animal may be as Nietzsche argued ahistorical living completely in the present it nonetheless plays a crucial role in human history The fascination with animals that leads not only to a desire to observe and even live alongside them but to capture or kill them is found in all civilizations The essays collected in Beastly Natures show how animals have been brought into human culture literally helping to build our societies as domesticated animals have done or contributing often in problematic ways to our concept of the wild The book begins with a group of essays that approach the historical relevance of human animal relations seen from the perspectives of various disciplines and suggest ways in which animals might be brought into formal studies of history Differences in species and location can greatly affect the shape of human animal interaction and so the essays that follow address a wide spectrum of topics including the demanding fate of the working horse the complex image of the American alligator at turns a dangerous predator and a tourist attraction the zoo gardens of Victorian England the iconography of the rhinoceros and the preference it reveals in society for myth over science relations between humans and wolves in Europe and what we can learn from society's enthusiasm for political animals such as the pets of the American presidents and the Soviet Union's space dogs. Taken together, these essays suggest new ways of looking not only at animals but at human history.
