Natural Woodland:

Natural Woodland George F. Peterken, 1996-03-28 A fascinating account of woodland natural history for all those concerned with woodland management and ecology      Natural Woodlands in the Nordic Countries Timo Tanninen, Bo Storrø, Ivar Haugen, Peter Friis Møller, Rolf Löfgren, Ingvi Thorsteinsson, Haukur Ragnarsson, 1998      Woodland Conservation and Management G. F. Peterken, 2013-11-11 Professor John Harper in his recent Population Biology of Plants 1977 made a comment and asked a question which effectively states the theme of this book Noting that one of the consequences of the development of the theory of vegetational climax has been to guide the observer's mind forwards i.e. that vegetation is interpreted as a stage on the way to something he commented that it might be more healthy and scientifically more sound to look more often backwards and search for the explanation of the present in the past to explain systems in relation to their history rather than their goal He went on to contrast the disaster theory of plant succession which holds that communities are a response to the effects of past disasters with the climax theory that they are stages in the approach to a climax state and then asked do we account most completely for the characteristics of a population by a knowledge of its history or of its destiny Had this question been put to R S Adamson E J Salisbury A G Tansley or A S Watt who are amongst the giants of the first forty years of woodland ecology in Britain their answer would surely have been that understanding lies in a knowledge of destiny Whilst not unaware of the historical facts of British woodlands they were preoccupied with ideas of natural succession and climax and tended to interpret their observations in these terms      Trees and Woodlands George Peterken, 2023-02-16 Features almost 300 colour photographs and brings together more than 60 years of research by a leading voice in British woodland ecology Trees define woodland They provide a complex multi layered habitat for a great range of wildlife yet they are wildlife themselves reacting to their circumstances and each other Woodlands are important to people supplying timber food and fuel accumulating carbon and offering places of refuge and refreshment But they are also under threat some stand in the way of progress and all are becoming increasingly vulnerable to neglect disease and climate change Trees and Woodlands brings together decades of research to explore the ecology nature conservation and wider cultural value of our native trees and shrubs and the various ways they have combined as woodland Incorporating personal experiences from 60 years as a forest ecologist Peterken describes the long history of use and management how this has influenced woodland wildlife and our art beliefs and social attitudes He concludes that most woods should be managed their timber and small wood being put to good use but recognises that this is all part of a larger question the future of ourselves Containing nearly 300 photographs and interspersed with box texts describing the history and ecology of representative woods across Britain this is a commentary on trees woodlands and our relationship with them from one of our most highly regarded forest ecologists      Woodland Conservation and Management George Peterken, 2012-12-06 Professor John Harper in his recent Population Biology of Plants 1977 made a comment and asked a question which effectively states the theme of this book Noting that one of the consequences of the development of the theory of vegetational climax has been to guide the observer's mind forwards i.e. that vegetation is interpreted as a stage on the way to something he commented that it might be more healthy and scientifically more sound to look more often backwards and search for the explanation of the present in the past to explain systems in relation to their history rather than their goal He went on to contrast the disaster theory of plant succession which holds that communities are a response to the effects of past disasters with the climax theory that they are stages in the approach to a climax state and then asked do we account most completely for the characteristics of a population by a knowledge of its history or of its destiny Had this question been put to R S Adamson E J Salisbury A G Tansley or A S Watt who are amongst the giants of the first forty years of woodland ecology in Britain their answer would surely have been that understanding lies in a knowledge of destiny Whilst not unaware of the historical facts of British woodlands they were preoccupied with ideas of natural succession and climax and tended to interpret their observations in these terms

Relationships Between Breeding Birds and Vegetation in Four Woodland Types of the Little Missouri National Grasslands Rick B. Hopkins, 1986

Forest Policies and Social Change in England Sylvie Nail, 2008-05-08 Forestry has been witness to some dramatic changes in recent years with several Western countries now moving away from the traditional model of regarding forests merely as sources of wood Rather these countries are increasingly recognizing their forests as multi purpose resources with roles which go far beyond simple economics In this innovative book Sylvie Nail uses England as a case study to explore the relationships between forests society and public perceptions raising important questions about forest policy and management both now and in the future Adopting a sociological approach to forest policy and management the book discusses the current validity of the two principles underlying forestry since the Middle Ages first that forestry should only exist when no better use of the land can be made and second that forestry itself should be profitable The author stresses how values and perceptions shape policies and conversely how policies can modify perceptions and also how policies can fail if they do not take perceptions into account She concludes that many of the issues facing English forestry in the 21st century from leisure health and amenity provision through education and rural as well as urban regeneration to biodiversity conservation go well beyond both national borders and the scope of forestry Indeed forestry in the 21st century seems to be less about planting and managing trees than about being a vector and a mirror of social change This novel synthesis provides a valuable resource for advanced students and researchers from all areas of natural resource studies including those interested in social history socio economics cultural geography and environmental psychology as well as those studying landscape ecology environmental history policy analysis and natural resource management      Native Woodlands of Scotland Scott

Wilson,2015-04-26 This book presents up to date information about Scotland s native woodlands It draws upon professional experience of scientific research survey and management where the author has studied many important native woodlands in Scotland and beyond      Assessing the Accuracy of Remotely Sensed Data Russell G. The Nature of the Cairngorms Philip Shaw, Des B.A. Thompson, 2006-06-12 The Cairngorms area is arguably the most significant for nature conservation in the British Isles and contains its largest National Park In this book 35 authors drawing on published and unpublished sources present an up to date review of the area's natural features including plants animals habitats geology and landforms The review falls into three parts The first and largest part describes the area's rich diversity of nature with each chapter summarising recent research findings trends and conservation issues for a different landform habitat or species group The second part considers deer management recreation and projected climate change impacts Part three focuses on rare and threatened species and identifies areas and habitats rich in species for which the Cairngorms are nationally and internationally important Plants in north-east Highlands Adam Watson, 2014 Timing of blueberry growth tree regeneration land use plant orientation The author noted when blueberry buds on Scottish alpine land began growth in spring and compared this with climatic data He mapped natural tree regeneration on Deeside and Donside The author criticises invalid claims about land use in Scotland and Norway and about the alleged effects of sporting estates in reducing land fertility Signs of orientation by plants and animals are described Spatial Modelling in Forest Ecology and Management Martin Jansen, Michael Judas, Joachim Saborowski, 2012-12-06 At the end of the 1970s when signs of destabilization of forests became visible in Europe on a large scale it soon became obvious that the syndrome called forest decline was caused by a network of interrelated factors of abiotic and biotic origin All attempts to explain the wide spread syndrome by a single cause and there were many of them failed or can only be regarded as a single mosaic stone in the network of causes behind the phenomenon Forest ecosystems are highly complex natural or quasi natural systems which exhibit different structures and functions and as a consequence different resilience to internal or external stresses Moreover forest ecosystems have a long history which means that former impacts may act as predisposing factors for other stresses The complexity and the different history of forest ecosystems are two reasons that make it difficult to assess the actual state and future development of forests But there are two other reasons one is the large time scale in which forests react the other is the idiosyncrasy of the reactions on different sites Due to the slow reaction and the regional complexity of the abiotic environment of forest ecosystems a profound analysis of each site and region is necessary to identify the underlying causes and driving forces when attempting to overcome the destruction of forest ecosystems Rural Well-being Ismail Serageldin, David R. Steeds, 1997 The Fourth Annual World Bank Conference on Environmentally Sustainable Development was convened in September 1996 with the aim to pursue four key goals 1 poverty reduction 2 widely shared growth 3 household national and global food security and 4 sustainable natural resource management This volume contains the presentations of all the plenary speakers as they are delivered or from written texts In addition it contains a summary of each of the thematic and regional roundtables as well as summaries of many of the associated and concurrent events The volume also reprints the background papers submitted by those who participated in the roundtables Full text statements from the associated event on Ethics Values Spiritually and Rural Well Being are also included
