Exclusive Economic Zone, 1984 Navigating Semi-colonialism Anne Reinhardt, 2020-10-26. China's status in the world of expanding European empires of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries has long been under dispute. Its unequal relations with multiple powers secured through a system of treaties rather than through colonization has invited debate over the degree and significance of outside control and local sovereignty. Navigating Semi Colonialism examines steam navigation introduced by foreign powers to Chinese waters in the mid nineteenth century as a constitutive element of the treaty system to illuminate both conceptual and concrete aspects of this regime arguing for the specificity of China's experience its continuities with colonialism in other contexts and its links to global processes. Focusing on the shipping network of open treaty ports the book examines the expansion of steam navigation the growth of shipping enterprise and the social climate of the steamship in the late nineteenth century as arenas of contestation and collaboration that highlight the significance of partial Chinese sovereignty and the limitations imposed upon it. It further analyzes the transformation of this regime under the nationalism of the Republican period and pursues a comparison of shipping regimes in China and India to provide a novel perspective on China under the treaty system.

The four 1958 Geneva Conventions on the Law of the Sea which codified and progressively developed this sector of our legislation were rather ephemeral despite the fact that they were constituent Conventions. In fact the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea UNCLOS again undertook the same task with the same spirit 20 years later after a long drawn out global negotiation process in which all the marine areas and problems pending were analysed and discussed by the countries attending and an apparently strengthened majority was attained including the essential agreement between the principal naval powers and the third world countries symbolised most grossly in the recognition of exclusive economic areas which were 200 miles wide in exchange for a significant alteration to the legal rules applicable to the international straits From 1973 to 1982 the negotiations showed that there were a number of particular factors affecting the seas strait countries user countries long range shing countries embedded countries archipelagic countries broad platform countries etc In 1982 when the UNCLOS was adopted it seemed to be a text with justified pretensions to be in force for a long period of time as the nine years of negotiations required for its adoption had taken into account the main problems pending agreement although not absolutely all The Legal Regime of Straits Hugo Caminos, Vincent P.
