Abstract

Leadership is important in change process and change management. Turkish educational system is undergoing a constant change. One of these changes was the change of the elementary school curricula, which had been accepted in the 2004-2005 academic year. The quantitative data were analysed through descriptive and interpretive analysis whereas the qualitative data were analysed through content analysis. A total of 179 elementary school principals joined the quantitative part of this study, whereas 154 of them participated in the qualitative one. It was observed that school principals were generally homogenous in their change tendencies. Within this context, this finding was supported by the qualitative data, as well.
