Schoolhouse Politics Peter B. Dow, 1991 Schoolhouse Politics tells the story of an experiment in curriculum design that was developed in the 1960s and called Man A Course of Study MACOS In an attempt to teach anthropology to ten year olds Jerome Bruner and his colleagues designed an elementary school course that combined fieldwork on the social behaviour of baboons a film based ethnographic study of an Eskimo tribe and hands on classroom materials MACOS was hailed as an original and exciting way to promote science literacy and to teach young people how to think like social scientists Teachers and students alike expressed enthusiasm for the course and it achieved nationwide distribution and widespread recognition as one of the outstanding social science curriculum projects of the period Yet by 1975 MACOS had been driven from the schools a casualty of a small but vocal group of conservatives critical of its content and methodology

Rethinking History, Science, and Religion Bernard Lightman, 2019-10-03 The historical interface between science and religion was depicted as an unbridgeable conflict in the last quarter of the nineteenth century Starting in the 1970s such a conception was too simplistic and not at all accurate when considering the totality of that relationship This volume evaluates the utility of the complexity principle in past present and future scholarship First put forward by historian John Brooke over twenty five years ago the complexity principle rejects the idea of a single thesis of conflict or harmony or integration or separation between science and religion Rethinking History Science and Religion brings together an interdisciplinary group of scholars at the forefront of their fields to consider whether new approaches to the study of science and culture such as recent developments in research on science and the history of publishing the global history of science the geographical examination of space and place and science and media have cast doubt on the complexity thesis or if it remains a serviceable historiographical model Schools can and do affect student achievement and this book recommends specific and attainable action steps to implement successful strategies culled from the wealth of research data How We Teach Science John L. Rudolph,2019-06-01 A former Wisconsin high school science teacher makes the case that how and why we teach science matters especially now that its legitimacy is under attack Why teach science The answer to that question will determine how it is taught Yet despite the enduring belief in this country that science should be taught there has been no enduring consensus about how or why This is especially true when it comes to teaching scientific process Nearly all of the basic knowledge we have about the world is rock solid The science we teach in high schools in particular laws of motion the structure of the atom cell division DNA replication the universal speed limit of light is accepted as the way nature works Everyone also agrees that students and the public more generally should understand the methods used to gain this knowledge But what exactly is the scientific method Ever since the late 1800s scientists and science educators have grappled with that question Through the years they've advanced an assortment of strategies ranging from the laboratory method to the five step method to science as inquiry to no method at all How We Teach Science reveals that each strategy was influenced by the intellectual cultural and political circumstances of the time In some eras learning about experimentation and scientific inquiry was seen to contribute to an individual's intellectual and moral improvement while in others it was viewed as a way to minimize public interference in institutional science John Rudolph shows that how we think about and teach science will either sustain or thwart future innovation and ultimately determine how science is perceived and received by the public
