Schools For The 21st Century Leadership Imperatives For Educational Reform:

Schools for the 21st Century Phillip C. Schlechty, 1990-02-15 Schlechty's common sense approach to restructuring is combined with a strategic planner's vision and the translation of beliefs into action. A wide audience including principals and superintendents can find in this book practical outlines for restructuring and a distinctive and focused view of their role in the educational system of the twenty first century. The School Administrator Schlechty provides an innovative adaptable framework for helping leaders in all areas of education to identify where change is needed in order to make schools more useful and responsive to children and society. Handbook of Literacy and Technology David Reinking, Michael C. McKenna, Linda D. Labbo, Ronald D. Kieffer, 1998-04-01 The major shift going on today in the technologies of reading and writing raises important questions about conventional conceptions of literacy and its role in education, society and culture. What are the important characteristics of electronic forms of reading and writing distinguishing them from printed forms? To what extent and in what ways is literacy being transformed by new technologies? This central question is addressed in this volume from diverse multidisciplinary perspectives. The contributing authors focus on a guiding question in one of the following areas which correspond to the major sections of the book: Transforming Texts: What are the new differences between printed and electronic texts and what are the implications of new textual forms for defining literacy especially in regard to teaching and learning in schools? Transforming Readers and Writers: How do electronic reading and writing change conceptualizations of literacy development from childhood through adulthood? Transforming Classrooms and Schools: What are the effects of introducing new reading and writing technologies into schools and classrooms? Transforming Instruction: How can instruction be adapted in response to the changing literacy landscape and how can teachers and students exploit forms of reading and writing to enhance teaching and learning? Transforming Society: What are the broad societal implications of the increasing prevalence of electronic forms of reading and writing? Transforming Literacy Research: What are the questions that must be addressed as digital reading and writing become more common and what approaches to research will be most useful in addressing those questions? This volume is the result of an interactive process. The contributors met as a group to discuss drafts of their chapters at a one day meeting convened and sponsored by the National Reading Research Center and had read each others chapters prior to this gathering. That meeting was followed by a two day conference attended by approximately 180 researchers, educators and policymakers who responded to an open invitation to present papers and to attend sessions focusing on the six major themes of the book. Contributors then revised their chapters based on interactions with fellow contributors, conference participants and volume editors. Thus this work is more than just a compilation of the individual authors' views. Rather it represents a synthesis of a broad range of current thinking about how literacy is being and may be transformed by technology. Personalized Learning Denise Wolk, 2003 Written by practitioners with practical interest in moving high schools toward personalization, this book will excite others to initiate

Who's in Charge Here? Noel Epstein, 2004-09-27 A Brookings Institution Press and the Education Commission of the States publication Behind the scenes a revolution is taking place in primary and secondary education Once thought sacrosanct the principle of local lay control has come under growing attack In the 1970s and 1980s governors sought greater influence by promulgating academic standards and even taking over failing schools Mayors soon followed with some wresting control of struggling local school systems Atop this the president and Congress greatly extended their reach into U S classrooms with enactment of the No Child Left Behind Act of 2001 which requires annual reading and math tests in grades 3 through 8 tougher yardsticks to measure whether pupils are making sufficient progress and penalties for schools that persistently fall short The result is a spider s web of responsibility It is difficult if not impossible to figure out where accountability lies Not only have municipal state and federal authorities reasserted control over the separate education government that the nation long ago created but an array of other institutions including the courts community based organizations and education management companies are also deeply involved in school decisions These trends have created a growing gap between those who make education policy and those responsible for the results What s more they have contributed to widespread confusion about how to fix public education In Who s in Charge Here some of the finest minds in education cut through the confusion to analyze key issues such as the Constitution s role in allocating responsibility for education the pros and cons of growing federal control how to ensure a supply of talented teachers for the underprivileged the impact of the school choice movement and the expanding non academic role of schools Other chapters explore the history of U S education governance and propose principles for creating a new system that especially benefits the children who are most in need The question of who should be The Routledge International Handbook of Creative Learning Julian Sefton-Green,Pat Thomson,Ken Jones,Liora Bresler,2011-07-15 The concept of creative learning extends far beyond Arts based learning or the development of individual creativity It covers a range of processes and initiatives throughout the world that share common values systems and practices aimed at making learning more creative This applies at individual classroom or whole school level always with the aim of fully realising young people s potential Until now there has been no single text bringing together the significant literature that explores the dimensions of creative learning despite the work of artists in schools and the development of a cadre of creative teaching and learning specialists Containing a mixture of newly commissioned chapters reprints and updated versions of previous publications this book brings together major theorists and current research Comprising of key readings in creative education it will stand as a uniquely authoritative text that will appeal to those involved in initial and continuing teacher education as well as research academics and policy specialists Sections include a general introduction to the field of creative learning arts learning traditions with sub sections on discrete art forms such as drama and visual art accounts of practice from artist teacher partnerships whole school change and reforms curriculum change assessment evaluative case studies of impact and effect global studies of policy change around creative learning The Future ,1993
