Science Of Sustainable Development Local Livelihoods And The Global Environment:

The Science of Sustainable Development Jeffrey Sayer, Bruce Morgan Campbell, 2004 Science faces major challenges in tackling the inter linked problems of poverty and environmental sustainability This book reviews how practical science can be applied to real life conservation and development problems and aims to demystify the sometimes obscure science of natural resources management interpreting it for the benefit of those who need to deal with the day to day problems of managing complex natural resource systems The authors give practical guidance to those who design and manage conservation programmes and demonstrate that technologies are available that enable integrated natural resource management to move from a theory to a reality They argue that the threats to the natural environment posed by globalisation require an integrated response encompassing different scales system components disciplines and knowledge types and that such a response can yield real benefits to those living in tropical developing countries whilst also achieving global environment objectives

Integrating Climate Change Actions into Local Development Livia Bizikova, John Robinson, Stewart Cohen, 2015-02-13 To date climate change adaptation and mitigation have been treated separately both in research and in the climate negotiations However a growing body of literature is now being developed that points to actual and potential synergies and trade offs between responses to climate change and sustainability This literature has evolved in a spontaneous way with diverse approaches and no common methodology to help practitioners explicitly plan for these synergies This special issue of the Climate Policy journal addresses this gap between scientific knowledge and practitioners needs by focussing on linkages between climate change and sustainable development at the level of conceptual framework and methods In particular the papers address in an integrated way local development options involving both adaptation and mitigation in order to promote resilience to climate change in human and natural systems The special issue provides policy and methodological guidelines for linking local development pathways with responses to climate change based on collaboration between local practitioners the public and scientists

Communities, Livelihoods and Natural Resources International Development Research Centre (Canada), 2006 This book synthesizes results from a 7 year programme of applied research on community based approaches to natural resource management in Asia By presenting field reports of innovative approaches to poverty reduction and sustainable resource use it provides practitioners with models of good practice in participatory community based resource management and it demonstrates how site based research contributes to broader learning in the field of natural resource management and policy There are 11 case studies featured from some of the most marginal areas of rural China Mongolia Laos V
Managing Natural Resources for Development in Africa Washington Odongo Ochola, P. C. Sanginga, Isaac Bekalo, 2010 The complex and dynamic interlinks between natural resource management NRM and development have long been recognized by national and international research and development organizations and have generated voluminous literature However much of what is available in the form of university course books practical learning manuals and reference materials in NRM is based on experiences from outside Africa Managing Natural Resources for Development in Africa A Resource Book provides an understanding of the various levels at which NRM issues occur and are being addressed scientifically economically socially and politically The book s nine chapters present state of the art perspectives within a holistic African context The book systematically navigates the tricky landscape of integrated NRM with special reference to Eastern and Southern Africa against the backdrop of prevailing local national regional and global social economic and environmental challenges The authors wide experience the rich references made to emerging challenges and opportunities and the presentation of different tools principles approaches case studies and processes make the book a rich and valuable one stop resource for postgraduate students researchers policymakers and NRM practitioners The book is designed to help the reader grasp in depth NRM perspectives and presents innovative guidance for research design and problem solving including review questions learning activities and recommended further reading The book was developed through a writeshop process by a multi disciplinary team of lecturers from the University of Nairobi Egerton University Kenyatta University the University of Zimbabwe the University of Malawi Makerere University and the University of Dar es Salam In addition selected NRM experts from regional and international research organizations including the World Agroforestry Center ICRAF the Africa Forest Forum RUFORUM IIRR and the International Development Research Centre IDRC participated in the writeshop and contributed material to the book

Governing Africa's Forests in a Globalized World Laura A. German, Anne-Marie Tiani, Alain Karsenty, 2009-12 Many countries around the world are engaged in decentralization processes and most African countries face serious problems with forest governance from benefits sharing to illegality and sustainable forest management This book summarizes experiences to date on the extent and nature of decentralization and its outcomes most of which suggest an underperformance of governance reforms and explores the viability of different governance instruments in the context of weak governance and expanding commercial pressures over forests Findings are grouped into two thematic areas decentralization livelihoods and sustainable forest management and international trade finance and forest sector governance reforms The authors examine diverse forces shaping the forest sector including the theory and practice of decentralization usurpation of authority corruption and illegality inequitable patterns of benefits capture and expansion of international trade in timber and carbon credits and discuss related outcomes on livelihoods forest condition and equity The book builds on earlier volumes exploring different dimensions of decentralization and perspectives from other world regions and distills dimensions of forest governance that are both unique to Africa and representative of broader global patterns Authors ground their analysis in relevant theory while attempting to distill implications of their findings for policy and practice

Renewable Energy from Forest Resources in the United States Barry Solomon, Valerie A.

Luzadis,2008-10-30 Interest in biomass energy resources from forests farms and other sources has been rapidly increasing in recent years because of growing concern with reducing carbon dioxide emissions and developing alternatives to increasingly scarce expensive and insecure oil supplies The uniqueness of this book is its coverage of biomass energy markets in the US from an economic as well as technical perspective Existing books typically focus on single markets or technical aspects at the exclusion of economics and have given greater coverage to biomass energy outside the US This edited collection has three main parts Part One provides a historical overview of forest biomass energy use in the US the major technologies economics market prospects and policies Part Two presents forest biomass energy assessments including life cycle and sustainability perspectives and Part Three includes five sets of regional case studies After reviewing the history of wood energy use in the US and technology options the book shows that forests could displace sixteen per cent of domestic transportation fuel use in 2030 Renewable Energy from Forest Resources in the United States includes a Foreword from Chris Flavin President of the Worldwatch Institute

Human Ecology Daniel G. Bates,Judith Tucker,2010-03-29 This book arose from the need to develop accessible research based case study material which addresses contemporary issues and problems in the rapidly evolving field of human ecology Academic political and indeed public interest in the environmental sciences is on the rise This is no doubt spurred by media coverage of climate change and global warming and attendant natural disasters such as unusual drought and flood conditions toxic dust storms pollution of air and water and the like But there is also a growing intellectual awareness of the social causes of anthropogenic environmental impacts political vectors in determining conservation outcomes and the role of local representations of ecological knowledge in resource management and sustainable yield production This is reflected in the rapid increase of ecology courses being taught at leading universities in the fast growing developing countries much as was the case a decade or two ago in Europe and North America The research presented here is all taken from recent issues of Human Ecology An Interdisciplinary Journal Since the journal itself is a leading forum for contemporary research the articles we have selected represent a cross section of work which brings the perspectives of human ecology to bear on current problems being faced around the world The chapters are organized in such a way to facilitate the use of this volume either to teach a course or to introduce an informed reader to the field
