you can read more than a million books for free This is an OCR edition with typos Excerpt from book that scarcely one fortieth of existing craters is now in activity or about one hundred in four thousand and yet that there are still about two thousand eruptions in a century or about twenty per annum Moreover Iceland offers a comparatively recent example to what extent a volcanic eruption may ruin a great region of fertile country Since this was written another devastation has taken place in the same island BONES OF MAN AMONG ORGANIC REMAINS For the further illustration of this important question it is requisite to examine whether the organic remains of extinct animals found in the soil and chiefly in limestone caverns and clefts of rock are accompanied by human remains bearing similar characters of antiquity Although as yet few systematic researches on this head have been made even in Europe and it is likely that in many bone deposits no human exuviae have been noticed still a sufficient number of instances attest to the fact and leave the question open only on the ground that they were accidental cases not belonging to the same period Donati Germer Rasoumowski and Guetard maintained that human bones had been found intermixed with those of lost species of mammiferae in several places They had been detected in England t in caves and fissures enumerated by Professor Buckland they were found at Meissen in Saxony and at Dur fort in France by M Firms A fossilized skeleton found in the schist rock when excavating the fortifications of Quebec Baron Cuvier in the last conversation we had with him on the subject in 1824 admitted that although the human fragments discovered at Cette near Monaco and in the caves of the Apennines might be more recent the opinions then in vogue would require considerable modification tAt Kirkby

Inventing Human Science Christopher Fox,Roy Porter,Robert Wokler,1995-10-06 The human sciences including psychology anthropology and social theory are widely held to have been born during the eighteenth century This first full length English language study of the Enlightenment sciences of humans explores the sources context and effects of this major intellectual development The book argues that the most fundamental inspiration for the Enlightenment was the scientific revolution of the seventeenth century Natural philosophers from Copernicus to Newton had created a magisterial science of nature based on the realization that the physical world operated according to orderly discoverable laws Eighteenth century thinkers sought to cap this achievement with a science of human nature Belief in the existence of laws governing human will and emotion social change and politics economics and medicine suffused the writings of such disparate figures as Hume Kant and Adam Smith and formed the basis of the new sciences A work of remarkable cross disciplinary scholarship this volume illuminates the origins of the human sciences and offers a new view of the Enlightenment that highlights the period s subtle social theory awareness of ambiguity and sympathy for historical and cultural difference
