Excerpt from Naturalism in English Poetry In the winter term of the year 1902 the Rev Stopford Brooke delivered at University College London a series of lectures on the rise of Naturalism in English Poetry which met with high appreciation from large and distinguished audiences They are here printed from the careful MS which Mr Brooke always prepared for his public addresses with the slight verbal alterations necessitated by the change from the form of the lecture to that of the essay These lectures are represented by the first seven chapters of the present volume The remaining essays are also printed from the MSS of lectures not connected with the above mentioned course but harmonizing with it and completing it so fitly that the volume in which they are included may be said to present a coherent study of a particular epoch of English poetry an epoch to which Mr Brooke brought a special sympathy and a special knowledge which had a deep and still unexhausted influence on English literature and English sentiment Two of these essays Shelley's Interpretation of Christianity and Byron's Cain have been printed since Mr Brooke's death in the Hibbert Journal and thanks are due to Dr L P Jacks for permitting their inclusion here The rest are now published for the first time About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
