Altering Nature B. A. Lustig,B.A. Brody,Gerald P. McKenny,2008-07-15 B Andrew Lustig Baruch A Brody and Gerald P McKenny Nearly every week the general public is treated to an announcement of another actual or potential breakthrough in biotechnology Headlines trumpet advances in assisted reproduction current or prospective experiments in cloning and developments in regenerative medicine stem cell technologies and tissue engineering Scientific and popular accounts explore the perils and the possibilities of enhancing human capacities by computer based biomolecular or mechanical means through advances in artificial intelligence genetics and nanotechnology Reports abound concerning ever more sophisticated genetic techniques being introduced into ag culture and animal husbandry as well as efforts to enhance and protect biodiversity Given the pace of such developments many insightful commentators have proclaimed the 21st century as the biotechnology century Despite a significant literature on the morality of these particular advances in biotechnology deeper ethical analysis has often been lacking Our preliminary review of that literature suggested that current discussions of normative issues in biotechnology have suffered from two major deficiencies First the discussions have been too often piecemeal in character limited to after the fact analyses of particular issues that provoked the debate and unconnected to larger concepts and themes Second a crucial missing element of those discussions has been the failure to reflect explicitly on the diverse disciplinary conceptions of nature and the natural that shape moral judgments about the legitimacy of specific forms of research and their applications     The Law of Chemical and Pharmaceutical Invention Jerome Rosenstock,2012
