Permanent Exclusion from School and Institutional Prejudice Anna Carlile, 2013-02-11 Permanent exclusion from school and institutional prejudice Creating change through critical bureaucracy Anna Carlile This book tells the story of permanent exclusion from school from within an urban children's services department It focuses on two areas what contributes to instances of permanent exclusion from school and what the effects are of its existence as a disciplinary option The book questions how and why local government officers make particular decisions about children and young people Rather than focussing on what children and young people did behaviourally to get excluded the book adopts a Foucauldian analysis to concentrate on their place within a larger policy community which includes professionals and policy makers It adopts a critical bureaucratic exercise in studying up on powerful organisations an informed approach to ameliorating social inequity The findings described here suggest a broad deep and opaque seam of institutional prejudice permanent exclusion from school can be understood to be both caused by this and to intensify its effects This has implications for the voices of young people subject to or at risk of permanent exclusion from school and the final chapter outlines a Foucauldian Freirian student voice project offering ideas about how schools might tackle this

Increasing the Effectiveness of Inservice Training for Desegregation Mark A. Smylie, Willis D. Hawley, 1982 This report reviews recent research on strategies that have been found to promote useful and effective inservice training programs in desegregated schools The first section presents approaches for planning and implementing inservice training for desegregation The second section describes inservice desegregation training programs that focus on 1 instructional methods 2 curriculum 3 self awareness empathy and interpersonal relations 4 discipline techniques and classroom management strategies and 5 parent involvement in school affairs The third section discusses the need to train administrators for school desegregation It is suggested that the most successful inservice training programs are those that have been planned and implemented by educators themselves address specific needs of teachers and administrators in single school settings including student achievement improving interpersonal relations discipline and classroom management techniques and curriculum innovation involve participants in program development and implementation and focus on developing practical skills and responses for the classroom Models of the components of inservice training programs and the relationship between training areas and outcomes are given Author MJL Rediscovering the Democratic Purposes of Education Lorraine McDonnell, P. Michael Timpane, Roger W. Benjamin, 2000 Why do America's public schools seem unable to meet today's social challenges As competing interest groups vie over issues like funding and curricula we seem to have lost sight of the democratic purposes originally intended for public education Public schools were envisioned by the Founders as democratically run institutions for instilling civic values but today's education system seems more concerned with producing good employees than good citizens Meanwhile our country's diversity has eroded consensus about citizenship and the professionalization of educators has diminished public involvement in schools This volume seeks to demonstrate that the democratic purposes of education are not outmoded ideas but can continue to be driving forces in public education Nine original articles by some of today's leading education theorists cut a broad swath across the political spectrum to examine how those democratic purposes might be redefined and revived It both establishes the intellectual foundation for revitalizing American schools and offers concrete ideas for how the educational process can be made more democratic The authors make a case for better empirical research about the politics of education in order to both reconnect schools to their communities and help educators instill citizenship An initial series of articles reexamines the original premise of American education as articulated by important thinkers like Jefferson and Dewey A second group identifies flaws in how schools are currently governed and offers models for change A final section analyzes the value conflicts posed by the twin strands of democratic socialization and governance and their implications for education policy Spanning philosophy history sociology and political science this book brings together the best current thinking about the specifics of education policy vouchers charter schools national testing and about the role of deliberation in a democracy It offers a cogent alternative to the exchange paradigm and shows how much more needs to be understood about an issue so vital to America's future On the Move to Meaningful
