Work Charles N. Darrah, 2013-04-11 This volume examines how employees in two manufacturing concerns perceive and perform their jobs and how the workplace influences employees thinking Based on extensive fieldwork the book describes and explores the experiences of daily work Workers are observed as they interpret instructions and deal with often contradictory expectations and ambiguous information The study shows that this process is far more complex than the one portrayed in discussions of skill requirements by managers expert analysts and many educators The book demonstrates that workplaces impart lessons that are at least as powerful as those conveyed in training programs and other official activities It explores how people acquire an organizational world view that enables them to interpret the rules of the workplace and to perform appropriately The book also examines how the new worker becomes part of a dynamic community of co workers Ethnographic descriptions document variations in the experiences of different workers and the strategies they adopt The picture that emerges challenges widely held assumptions about the importance of skill requirements at work and the presumed inadequacy of ordinary people to work effectively This book is especially timely as the nation seeks to reform education to better meet the demands of increased competition and to address domestic concerns about preparing people for employment A bibliography of references is included The International Encyclopedia of Education Torsten

Postlethwaite, 1994-04-19 Scholarly information in all fields of human knowledge is in continuous flux Educational practices change not only as a result of reforms which are the subject of legislation but also in response to new societal demands needs and changes in the economic conditions in different countries It is this change within the various fields of education and the fact that many of the entries in the first edition were written in the early 1980s which convinced the editors in 1990 of the need for a completely new edition of the Encyclopedia The vast majority of entries in the second edition are completely new in only a few cases have entries from the first edition or from the supplementary volumes been updated New entries have also been commissioned on specific topics sociology of education girls and women in education the history of education anthropology philosophy of education and instructional psychology so that the scope of the original sections has been expanded Every effort has been made to present the most up to date information about the theme dealt with in each entry Authors were selected on the strength of their worldwide knowledge of the topic on which they were asked to write The authors of over 1 200 entries represent 96 countries The Honorary Editorial Advisory Board helped ensure that a balance was achieved and contacts with international organizations assisted in selecting authors with a good international overview Particular attention has been paid to the inclusion of entries of special concern to the Third World This is clearly evident in those entries dealing with educational and policy planning economics of education vocational education and comparative education The International Encyclopedia of Education Torsten Husén,T. Deci,Richard M. Ryan,2013-06-29 Early in this century most empirically oriented psychologists believed that all motivation was based in the physiology of a set of non nervous system tissue needs The theories of that era reflected this belief and used it in an attempt to explain an increasing number of phenomena It was not until the 1950s that it became irrefutably clear that much of human motivation is based not in these drives but rather in a set of innate psychological needs Their physiological basis is less understood and as concepts these needs lend themselves more easily to psycho logical than to physiological theorizing The convergence of evidence from a variety of scholarly efforts suggests that there are three such needs self determination competence and interpersonal relatedness This book is primarily about self determination and competence with particular emphasis on the former and about the processes and structures that relate to these needs The need for interpersonal relat edness while no less important remains to be explored and the findings from those explorations will need to be integrated with the present theory to develop a broad organismic theory of human motivation Thus far we have articulated self determination theory which is offered as a working theory a theory in the making To stimulate the research that will allow it to evolve further we have stated self determination theory in the form of minitheories that relate to more circumscribed domains and we have developed paradigms for testing predictions from the various minitheories
