Is Future Given? Ilya Prigogine, 2003 In this book after discussing the fundamental problems of current science and other philosophic concepts beginning with controversies between Heraclitus and Parmenides Ilya Prigogine launches into a message of great hope the future has not been determined Contrary to globalisation and the apparent contemporary mass culture society individual behaviour is beginning to increasingly become the key factor which governs the evolution of both the world and society as a whole It is a message that challenges existing widespread views implicitly or explicitly through mass communication moreover the importance of the individual's actions implies a reflection of each person on the responsibilities that each one assumes when taking or acting upon a decision This responsibility is associated with the freedom of thought as well as a critical analysis of fashions customs preconceived ideas and ideologies externally imposed exactly contrary to the ideas of those who wish us to be perfect consumers in a world dominated only by monetary wealth Challenging this drive towards the elimination of freedom of thought in the individual is now imperative if we are to save man and his planet from catastrophe which seems to be ever imminent and unfortunately irreversible This last book of Ilya Prigogine provides a small disputable but nonetheless valuable contribution towards that end demonstrates that the logics of value of the market and of universities are not only different but opposed to one another By introducing the reader to a variety of cases some well known and others not Woodhouse explains how academic freedom and university autonomy are being subordinated to corporate demands and how faculty have attempted to resist this subjugation He argues that the mechanistic discourse of corporate culture has replaced the language of education subject based disciplines and the professors who teach them have become resource units students have become educational consumers and curricula have become program packages Graduates are now products and competing in the global economy has replaced the search for truth Canadian Books in Print.
