McKinney,International Water Management Institute,1999 The world is facing severe and growing challenges in maintaining water quality and meeting the rapidly growing demand for water resources In addition water used for irrigation the largest use of water in most developing countries will likely have to be diverted increasingly to meet the needs of urban areas and industry whilst remaining a prime engine of agricultural growth Finally environmental and other in stream water demands become more important as economies develop The river basin has been acknowledged to be the appropriate unit of analysis to address these challenges facing water resources management and modeling at this scale can provide essential information for policy makers in their decisions on allocation of resources This paper reviews the state of the art of modeling approaches to integrated water resources management at the river basin scale with particular focus on the potential of coupled economic hydrologic models and concludes with directions for future modeling exercises Proceedings of the Conference on Environmental Modeling and Simulation, April 19-22, 1976, Cincinnati, Ohio Wayne R. Ott,1976 Application of the Systems Approach to the Management of Complex Water Systems Slobodan P. Simonovic,2020-12-23 During the past five decades we have witnessed a tremendous evolution in water resource system management Three characteristics of this evolution are of particular note First the application of the systems approach to complex water management problems has been established as one of the most important advances in the field of water resource management Second the past five decades have brought a remarkable transformation of attitude in the water resource management community towards environmental concerns and action to address these concerns Third applying the principles of sustainability to water resource decision making requires major changes in the objectives on which decisions are based and an understanding of the complicated inter relationships between existing ecological economic and social factors The Special Issue includes 15 contributions that offer insights into contemporary problems approaches and issues related to the management of complex water resources systems It will be presumptuous to say that these 15 contributions characterize the success or failure of the systems approach to support water resources decision making However these contributions offer interesting lessons from current experiences and highlight possible future work Multi-constituent
