

MODERNIZATION AND POLITICAL CHANGE

The Latin American and Amer-European Nations

ARTHUR S. BANKS

ARTHUR S. BANKS is currently working on a multivariate analysis of cross-national time-series data under a grant from the National Science Foundation. He is Associate Professor of Political Science and Director of the Center for Comparative Political Research of the State University of New York at Binghamton. He is author (with Robert B. Textor) of A Cross-Polity Survey.

A DECADE has now passed since the publication of Seymour M. Lipset's (1969) seminal article, "Some Social Requisites of Democracy." As in the case of most such efforts to chart a new course in behavioral science, the article earned its author both praise and criticism—praise for what he was attempting to do, criticism (both conceptual and methodological) for the manner of its execution (see Cutright, 1963). The present paper reports on research that represents, in part, a return to Lipset's earlier terrain, namely, a comparison between the Latin American and Amer-European nations, as measured by longitudinal indices both political and "developmental" in character. The indicators upon which the present research is based differ, however, from those employed by Lipset. The political indicators were selected with reference to problems of change, rather than of legitimacy, while the remainder (a set of transportation and communications measures) relate to what may be termed technological modernization, rather than to Lipset's "economic development."¹ The principal purpose of the study is to assess the relative homogeneity of (hence the relative "distance" between) the two groups of nations, along the dimensions indicated, for a series of thirteen data points

AUTHOR'S NOTE: Research for this paper has been supported by the National Science Foundation under grant GS-2420.

Models of Political Change in Latin America, Strategic Choice Models of Political Change in Latin America David Collier, Deborah L. Norden, 2016 The article assesses the use of strategic choice models in the study of Latin American politics These models explore how given actors pursue goals by shaping the context in which other actors make choices The discussion centers on Hirschman's analysis of reform mongering Przeworski's threshold model of transitions to democracy and O'Donnell's model of democratic consolidation Basic components of the models are examined including the definition of actors preference distributions coalitional thresholds perceptions of the likelihood of given outcomes and efforts to change actual and perceived costs of these outcomes The relationship between such models and more familiar perspectives in the Latin American field is then explored The models have a distinctive emphasis on uncertainty and the creative use of uncertainty by political leaders yet they also have much in common with other research traditions The article advocates eclecticism in employing these alternative analytic approaches

Market Economics and Political Change Juan D. Lindau, 2000-01-01 Does market liberalization promote democracy The accepted answer from scholars pundits and politicians alike has been yes However the contributors to this innovative study of market reforms and political change in Mexico and the People's Republic of China argue that this easy equation is not only empirically uncertain but methodologically flawed Using comparative contextual analysis the contributors carefully identify the elective affinities between these two very different polities to reveal key variables that determine how markets will affect democracy particularly law as the rudder of democracy and the role of political culture in civil society

A Political Geography of Latin America Jonathan R. Barton, 2002-11-01 The nation states and peoples of South and Central America Cuba Haiti and the Dominican Republic that together form the political geographical region of Latin America encompass a wide range of societies politics and economies This text exposes the differences between places regions and countries individuals and societies offering an invaluable insight into the themes of political and economic development and provides a guide to understanding power and space relations From the Antarctic to the tropical jungles the coastal communities to the highland villages the mega cities to isolated rural existence the political geographies of lives localities cities and rurality are too sophisticated to be subjected to generalizations Adopting a critical human geography perspective Jonathon Barton provides an understanding of similarities difference and sophisticated human geographies

Political Change David E. Apter,1973 Essays concerned with the current debate on how the field of politics ought to be restructured Hong Kong's Tortuous Democratization Ming Sing,2004 This book raises interesting questions about the process of democratization in Hong Kong It asks why democracy has been so long delayed when Hong Kong s level of socio economic development has become so high It relates democratization in Hong Kong to wider studies of the democratization process elsewhere and it supplements the received wisdom that democracy was delayed because of colonial rule and by the opposition of China with new thinking for example that its quasi bureaucratic authoritarian political structure vested power in bureaucrats who refused to have top down democratization a politically weak civil society and a non participant political culture that crippled bottom up democratization plus the division between pro democratic civil society and political society

Political Change in the Third World Charles Andrain,2012-07-26 In this informative and highly readable book first published in 1988 Charles Andrain explores the ways in which public policies and socio political beliefs and structures cause political change in the Third World The author examines 3 types of political change 1 transitions in political leaders and their policies 2 fundamental transformations in political structures policy priorities and political strategies for dealing with policy issues and 3 the impact of economic education and health care policies on the society itself including changes in unemployment inflation economic growth literacy and birth and death rates In the first part of the book Professor Andrain presents a general overview of political change in the Third World explaining how different models of political systems explain the dynamics of political events in Latin America Asia Africa and the Middle East In the second part of the book he then applies these models to specific changes in five developing nations Vietnam Cuba Chile Nigeria and Iran The book is unique in its careful blending of a policy focus with a structural analysis of nation states domestic social groups and international institutions in the often turbulent regions of the developing world It thus provides a very useful systematic approach to political developments in the Third World that will be welcomed by students faculty and general readers A

Democratisation in the Dr Congo from Joseph Mobutu to Joseph Kabila Hubert Kabasu Babu Katulondi, 2019-03-14 The Democratic Republic of Congo DRC has experienced one of the most complex meandering and uncertain democratisation processes in Africa In 2016 the third cycle of elections was not organised The Presidential Majority M P was accused of concocting an amendment of the constitution aimed at granting a third term to the incumbent President Joseph Kabila Furthermore the introduction of a Voting Machine by the electoral commission fuelled violent protests and a political impasse The DRC tittered on the brink of collapse into another civil war in 2016 Yet against all odds the Congolese electoral commission organised peaceful elections in December 2018 Stunningly the presidential election was won by the opposition A peaceful transfer of power at the helm of the state occurred for the first time in the country after 58 years of independence The DRC is now regarded as a model of political alternation in power in Central Africa The essay stems from the observation that predominant theorisations of Congolese politics fail to grasp the fecundity of the Congolese democratisation Most scholars and analysts tend to focus on the deficits and flaws inherent in Congolese politics Hence they are often oblivious to foundational strides accomplished in this process as it unfolded in the DRC This essay undertakes a modelled exploration of the democratisation process that unfolded in the DRC from the era of President Joseph Mobutu 1990 1997 to the dispensation of President Joseph Kabila 2001 2018 The effort utilises a paradigmatic framework to unravel the intricacies of a phenomenon occurring in a country which at first glance is often assumed to escape any ideal type To this effect the essay utilises Dr Samuel Huntington s Model of the Third Wave of Democratisation It elucidates the causes patterns problems and prospects of furthering this process in the DRC The book proposes a dialectical approach propounding the possibility of the consolidation of democratisation in the DRC Routledge

Development Models in Muslim Contexts Robert Springborg, 2009-09-30 Recent discussions of the Chinese economic development model the emergence of an alternative Muslim model over the past quarter century and the faltering globalisation of the Washington Consensus all point to the need to investigate more systematically the nature of these models and their competitive attractions This is especially the case in the Muslim world which both spans different economic and geographic categories and is itself the progenitor of a development model The Chinese model has attracted the greatest attention in step with that country's phenomenal growth and therefore provides the primary focus for this book This volume examines the characteristics of this model and its reception in two major regions of the world Africa and Latin America It also investigates the current competition over development models across Muslim contexts The question of which model or models if any will guide development in Muslim majority countries is vital not only for them but for the world as a whole This is the first political economy study to address this vital question as well as the closely related issue of the centrality of governance to development
