Making Space in the Works of James Joyce

Valerie Benejam, John Bishop, 2012-05-23 James Joyce's preoccupation with space be it urban geographic stellar geometrical or optical is a central and idiosyncratic feature of his work In Making Space in the Works of James Joyce some of the most esteemed scholars in Joyce studies have come together to evaluate the perception and mental construction of space as it is evoked through Joyce's writing The aim is to bring together several recent trends of literary research and criticism to bear on the notion of space in its most concrete sense The essays move dialectically out of an immediate focus on the phenomenological and intra psychic into broader and wider meditations on the social urban and collective As Joyce's formal experiments appear the response to the difficulty of enunciating truly the experience of lived space this eventually leads us to textual and linguistic space The final contribution evokes the space with which Joyce worked daily that of his manuscripts or what he called paperspace With essays addressing all of Joyce's major works this volume is a critical contribution to our understanding of modernism as well as of the relationship between space language and literature

Early Planning

Utopias Dorina Pojani, Cathy Keys, Rory Little, 2025-07-15 There is little doubt that urban planning has historically failed women To liberate the profession from patriarchal influences it is necessary to revisit the preconceptions that shaped early efforts to design new cities or improve existing ones This book critiques the work of twenty male planning luminaries who proposed urban models interventions and approaches on both sides of the North Atlantic during the Second Industrial Revolution These early visions often presented as emancipatory or utopian set European and North American cities as well as their colonial counterparts on an inexorable masculinist path The grand urban plans and projects of the late 19th and early 20th centuries were largely bankrolled by wealth extracted from colonial enterprises in Africa Asia and Latin America A reverence for geometry order and standardization alongside a monumental scale reflected a hegemonic and monolithic vision of the city with little tolerance for cultural or physical difference Limitless urban growth and the rapid effortless movement of people were valorised and for the first time in history roads became more important than homes Many of these same planners indifferent to cultural and physical differences readily accepted the continuation of class divisions in cities Comprehensive plans for both small and large settlements were hierarchical with the wealthiest or most powerful occupying central positions of power Functional segregation later institutionalized as zoning enforced spatial divisions between the public male and private female spheres Even as the planning agenda prioritized men's issues related to industry and commerce domestic ideology was promoted during this period The book also highlights the work of several female activists and reformers from the same era Although these women rarely envisioned full blown urban utopias or produced extensive writings on planning they worked to improve built environments for all Female reformers were more attuned to the lived experiences of city dwellers than male planners architects and engineers While men focused on structures and infrastructure women were concerned with the human condition Rather than expanding or clearing out the existing urban fabric women sought to restore it Practically women extended their reproductive duties from the home to the entire city envisioning it as a collective living space where everyone shared responsibility for one another's daily welfare This book calls for a return to that planning philosophy at a time when numerous techno utopias are being imagined and built often backed by major private corporations or individual male billionaires

Le Corbusier's Venice Hospital Project Mahnaz Shah, 2017-05-15 While Le Corbusier's urban projects are generally considered confrontational in their relationship to the traditional urban fabric his proposal for the Venice hospital project remained an exercise in preserving the medieval fabric of the city of Venice through a systemic replication of its urban tissue

This book offers a detailed study of Le Corbusier's Venice hospital project as a plausible built entity. In addition, it analyses it in the light of its supposed affinity with the medieval urban configuration of the city of Venice. No formal attempt to date has been made to critically analyse the hospital project's design considerations in comparison to the medieval urban configuration of the city of Venice. Using a range of methodologies including those from architectural theory and history, using archival resources on site analysis and interviews with important resource persons, this book is an interpretation of the conceptual basis for Le Corbusier's understanding of the structural formulation of the city of Venice as mentioned in The Radiant City 1935. In doing so, it deciphers the diagrammatic analysis of the city structure found in this work into a set of coherent design modules that were applied in the hospital project and that could become a point of further investigation. Architects and other architecturally interested laypeople with an interest in Venice will find the book a valuable addition to their knowledge. For architectural historians, the book makes an important link between modernism and the historically grown Venice.

Carbon Neutral City Jun Wang, 2025-08-22 This book introduces the ecological low carbon and sustainable concept of ideal cities from different views. With beliefs and practices of scholars in the past in pursuit of ideal cities, it is written with historical events in the development of low carbon cities. In this way, activities about carbon peaking and carbon neutrality happening worldwide at present can be shown, and efforts various countries have paid off can be exhibited. Besides, as for the centralized and the distributed space structure in urban evolution, the book discusses their trends and comes up with an ideal model, the distributed city, to realize carbon neutrality based on the distributed structure. Therefore, with a practical example, in planning the feasibility of the distributed city is analyzed in several fields including space, energy, traffic, water, waste disposal, etc. The book can be used as materials for professionals in city planning and construction, low carbon development, and other fields as well as a way for ordinary people to learn about the complex city.
