

THE HYDRA

NEW WORLD BESTIARY INFORMATION ON HYDRAS FOR SECOND EDITION WFRP

"The War Hydra is a titanic monster, a creature from the dark caverns below the Blackspine Mountains."

- Furlon of Clar Karond, Highborn Sorcerer and Historian

No scholar knows the true origin of the Hydra, although some theorise they are related to the Cold Ones and Dragons, while other scholars point out that they are clearly a form of stable-mutant that has emerged from the Chaos Wastes. They are a widely distributed creature, dwelling in the Annuli Mountains of Ulthuan, the Iron Mountains and Blackspine Mountains of Naggaroth and throughout the Chaos Wastes. Hydra have even been found as far south as the island chains that rest in the Boiling Sea, although how they came to be there is hotly debated. The Dark Elf Beastmasters make the greatest use of Hydra in war, although other races have also occasionally experimented with using these large reptilian beasts in battle, typically by breeding them from stolen hatchlings or eggs.

Hydra are multiple headed reptiles whose serpentine heads can belch out flame in the manner of dragons. There other weapons are also formidable, allowing them to rend foes in two with their mighty jaws or grabbing and crushing smaller creatures within the coils of their many necks. Their bodies are squat and muscular with four mighty legs, and the entirety of the Hydra is protected by thick scales as tough as iron plate.

Although relatively stable in form, Hydra are malleable by the mutating power of Chaos. In addition, the Druchii have owned Hydra for countless years, creating new sub-species through the arts of crossbreeding and the casting of dark incantations. The Beastmasters cage these fell creatures in lairs below the Blackspine Mountains and Karond Kar, although many have escaped into the wild.

INTRODUCTION

This core of this document contains five sub species of Hydra. Apart from the Veteran Hydra, all are average members of their species that have not progressed through any Careers. Also included in the document is the War Trained Monster career for GMs (or players!) wishing to enhance these Hydra or any other beast of war, along with some special Hydra Features that return options available in the first edition of WFRP and Mordheim. Finally, this document includes profiles for the Carnivorous Snapper and Dark Elf Beastmaster Apprentice, who are commonly encountered alongside these majestic multi-headed beasts, along with a few Magic Items and information on Hekarti, the Dark Elf Goddess of Hydra and Dark Magic.

HYDRA FEATURES

While the profiles here cover a range of possible Hydra, many more subtypes and breeds exist. To this end, a number of 'Hydra Features' are presented in this document, to cover some of the more common examples of Hydra that have existed in the various incarnations of the Warhammer World. By adding these features to any of the Hydra profiles included in this document, or the standard Hydra from Old World Bestiary, a number of different breeds are possible. Note that these features are not mutations and are present on a Hydra at birth, and therefore should not be available through the expenditure of Experience Points.

THE HYDRA'S HEADS

All Hydra's have the ability to grow back heads lost or damaged through combat. For most Hydra this takes days to replace a head that was lost. Should a Hydra either lose a head or have a head critically damaged for whatever reason, it will grow back in 2d10 days, assuming the Hydra is alive.
