Excerpt from Old English Libraries The Making Collection and Use of Books During the Middle Ages With the arrangement and equipment of libraries this essay has little to do the ground being already covered adequately by Dr Clark in his admirable monograph on The Care of Books Herein is described the making use and circulation of books considered as a means of literary culture It seemed possible to throw a useful sidelight on literary history and to introduce some human interest into the study of bibliography if the place held by books in the life of the Middle Ages could be indicated Such at all events was my aim but I am far from sure of my success in carrying it out and I offer this book merely as a discursive and popular treatment of a subject which seems to me of great interest The book has suffered from one unhappy circumstance It was planned in collaboration with my friend Mr James Hutt M A but unfortunately owing to a breakdown of health Mr Hutt was only able to help me in the composition of the chapter on the Libraries of Oxford which is chiefly his work Had it been possible for Mr Hutt to share all the labour with me this book would have been put before the public with more confidence About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
