Rogue Reels Margaret Dickinson,2019-07-25 Margaret Dickinson's history of oppositional film is a pioneering account of an important but little documented aspect of modern British Cinema the often extreme form of independent cinema that accompanied the radical politics of the 1960s and 70s During the 70s an organized independent film and video movement emerged including such filmmaking groups as London Filmmakers Co op Cinema Action Amber Liberation Films and Sheffield Co op This avant garde exerted an increasing influence within the British media mainstream changing attitudes and practice and enabling cross over work by filmmakers such as Peter Greenaway and Sally Potter This oppositional sector revolutionized British media especially during the formation of Channel Four at the start of the 1980s even as the political landscape at large was shifting dramatically to the right Organized into three parts Rogue Reels provides the first overview of the various strands of politicized filmmaking that emerged in postwar Britain Part I is a concise history of the movement Part II collects key texts and documents from the period 1971-92 Part III is made up of seven oral histories of the most influential production houses Recuperating the radical tradition of postwar filmmaking which continues to impact on today's media culture Rogue Reels raises urgent issues of policy and practice Mixing narrative with first hand accounts and the important statements and documents of this movement the book provides the first overview of the different strands of filmmaking that are still impacting on avant garde and mainstream practice The British Consumer Co-operative

FilmMakers Cooperative was founded in 1966 by a group of artists who sought to explore the possibilities of the moving image whilst maintaining autonomy over the production distribution and exhibition of their work Although their films were not overtly political artists nevertheless expressed their political attitudes by creating nonnarrative films thereby rejecting conventional narrative structures associated with mainstream commercial cinema which they perceived as supporting the dominant ideology in society A return to narrative in the 1980s coincided with the introduction of British Art Cinema and the art house films of Derek Jarman Peter Greenaway and Sally Potter all of whom made experimental films in the early days of the London Co op British art cinema Paul Newland,Brian Hoyle,2019-07-23 This is the first book to provide a direct and comprehensive account of British art cinema Film history has tended to view British filmmakers as aesthetically conservative but the truth is they have a long tradition of experiment and artistry both within and beyond the mainstream Beginning with the silent period and running up to the 2010s the book draws attention to this tradition while acknowledging that art cinema in Britain is a complex and fluid concept that needs to be considered within broader concerns It will be of particular interest

British films of the 1970s Paul Newland, 2015-11-01 British films of the 1970s offers highly detailed and insightful critical analysis of a range of individual films of the period This analysis draws upon an innovative range of critical methodologies which place the film texts within a rich variety of historical contexts The book sets out to examine British films of the 1970s in order to get a clearer understanding of two things the fragmentary state of the filmmaking culture of the period and the fragmentary nature of the nation that these films represent It argues that there is no singular narrative to be drawn about British filmmaking in the 1970s other than the fact that these films offer evidence of a Britain and ideas of Britishness characterised by vicissitudes While this was a period of struggle and instability it was also a period of openings of experiment and of new ideas Newland looks at many films including Carry On Girls O Lucky Man That'll be the Day The Shout and The Long Good Friday

The British working class in postwar film Philip Gillett, 2019-01-04 An incidental pleasure of watching a film is what it tells us about the society in which it is made Using a sociological model The British working class in postwar film looks at how working class people were portrayed in British feature films in the decade after the Second World War Though some of the films examined are well known others have been forgotten and deserve reassessment Original statistical data is used to assess the popularity of the films with audiences With its interdisciplinary approach and the avoidance of jargon this book seeks to broaden the approach to film studies Students of media and cultural studies are introduced to the skills of other disciplines while sociologists and historians are encouraged to consider the value of film evidence in their own fields This work should appeal to all readers interested in social history and in how cinema and
