Steuernagel, Ellen Cole, Esther D. Rothblum, 1990-04-17 Here is a useful and illustrative guide for those interested in the impact of feminist scholarship on traditional academic disciplines. The chapters reveal the ways in which mutual aid processes help individuals overcome social and emotional trauma in contemporary society by reducing isolation, universalizing individual problems, and mitigating stigma. Using the life cycle as a framework, the editors establish a theoretical model for practice and demonstrate how social workers as group leaders can foster the healing and empowering process of mutual aid. The contributors also consider the fundamentals of the mutual aid process, the institutional benefits of group service, and specific clinical examples of mutual aid groups. Each chapter offers detailed case materials that illustrate both group work skills and developmental issues for a variety of populations and settings, including HIV-positive and AIDS patients, the homeless, and perpetrators and victims of sexual abuse and family violence. New chapters in this completely revised and updated third edition illustrate the power of mutual aid processes in dealing with children traumatized by the events of September 11, adult survivors of sexual abuse, parents with developmentally challenged children, people with AIDS in substance recovery, and mentally ill older adults. Annual Review of Gerontology and Geriatrics M. Originally published by The Tiresias Press Inc. Cross-cultural Communication and Aging in the United States Hana Noor Al-Deen, 2013-10-18 Recently the communication discipline has devoted increasing energy toward the study of aging, yet most of the research has insufficiently addressed a crucial factor in communicative relationships: culture. Meanwhile, cross-cultural, intercultural communication has not adequately addressed the aging process. Combining three powerful elements—communication, aging, and culture—all of which have an increasingly profound impact on today's multicultural society, this book focuses on older Americans in various communicative contexts within the framework of their cultures. Composed of original research by experts in their respective fields the book combines communication aging and culture for a unique examination of those elements in American society Section 1 deals with perspectives in cross cultural communication and aging These perspectives both illustrate the issues that greatly affect the lives of our elders and suggest ways to improve their status Section 2 showcases three American co cultures Hawaiian Arab and Mormon illustrate how language attitudes and mentoring can serve as the links for maintaining cross generational continuity in multicultural society Section 3 demonstrates that many American organizations frequently contribute to the hardships that both internal elder customers employees and external elder customers residents and patients must endure Section 4 incorporates popular culture and aging It presents the role of selective popular media in portraying our elders Because Americans rely heavily on the media their mediated perceptions can have a profound impact on their attitudes toward the older population Designed as a reader or supplementary text for college students in communication gerontology anthropology sociology and other related fields this text can also be used by professionals in gerontological service areas by libraries and as a personal reference It offers extensive appendices figures and tables for additional reference
