Managing and Adapting to Global Change in Tourism Places Alan A. Lew, 2017-10-02 Today more than ever communities need to develop resilience strategies to adapt to the varied and often unpredictable forces of global change. The focus of this collection of articles from Tourism Geographies is on global change in tourism places. Global change incorporates social and economic globalization which is arguably the most important process to have shaped the development of modern tourism since the nineteenth century and climate change which is likely to be the most significant factor influencing human behavior and livelihood in the coming decades. The organization of these articles reflects a traditional geography approach which starts with an emphasis on the physical geography foundations of the human condition especially through the issue of climate change. This is then broadened by a series of insightful comparative studies of how tourism communities react, adapt and relate to their changing natural and social conditions. This collection of papers addresses major issues and adaptive paths for tourism destinations as they face the challenges of our contemporary world. This book was published as a special issue of Tourism Geographies. Claiming the High Ground Stanley F. Stevens, 1996 Stanley Stevens brings new ecological and historical perspectives to his study of a subsistence society in ever increasing contact with the outside world. The Sherpas of the Mount Everest region famous for their mountaineering exploits have frequently been depicted as victims of the world's highest altitude tourist boom. But have the Sherpas and their homeland been transformed by tourism? He is the first to analyze the complex interaction of local environmental knowledge, cultural beliefs and socio-economic and political conditions in changing Sherpa subsistence strategies, land use practices and local resources management institutions. Claiming the High Ground is must reading for all those interested in peoples and concerned about the conservation of the earth's high places.

Anthropology and Climate Change Susan A. Crate, Mark Nuttall, 2023-11-30 In this third edition of Anthropology and Climate Change Susan Crate and Mark Nuttall offer a collection of chapters that examine how anthropologists work on climate change issues with their collaborators both in academic research and practicing contexts and discuss new developments in contributions to policy and adaptation at different scales. Building on the first edition's pioneering focus on anthropology's burgeoning contribution to climate change research, policy and action as well as the second edition's focus on transformations and new directions for anthropological work on climate change, this new edition reveals the extent to which anthropologists' contributions are considered to be critical by climate scientists, policymakers, affected communities and other rights holders. Drawing on a range of ethnographic and policy issues, this book highlights the work of anthropologists in the full range of contexts as scholars, educators and practitioners from academic institutions to government bodies, international science agencies and foundations working in interdisciplinary research teams and with community research partners. The contributions to this new edition showcase important new academic research as well as applied and practicing approaches. They emphasize human agency in the archaeological record, the rapid development in the last decade of community-based and community driven research and disaster research provide rich ethnographic insight into worldmaking practices interventions and collaborations and discuss how and in what ways anthropologists work in policy areas and engage with regional and global assessments This new edition is essential for established scholars and for students in anthropology and a range of other disciplines including environmental studies as well as for practitioners who engage with anthropological studies of climate change in their work Routledge Handbook of Highland Asia Jelle J.P.
