

THE CONCEPT OF PUBLIC POLICY

Introduction

The concept of public policy presupposes that there is a domain of life which is not governed by private individuals, but which is committed to management by government or government-like agencies. The concept of public policy, like others we will discuss as "public economy", public order", "public health" and so on, has growing political content.

Public policy" has in its origin those spheres which are so labelled as "public" as opposed to spheres involving the idea of "private". The concept of public policy presupposes that there is one area or domains of life which is not governed by private individuals, but held in common. The public conception that domain of human activity which is regarded as requiring governmental intervention or common action.

Public policy has been widely defined as meaning all those decisions or determinations and actions that constitute the political domain, national policy or, although, government action in the sense of the domain of all political and public policy as "the thing at one time or place or that objectives and influencing measures should be taken in order to deal with a particular problem". Chandler and Pless (1971) define public policy as "the course of action determined by national authorities or governmental agencies". Johnson and Johnson (1971) give that it is the public response to the issues by improving the human condition. In other definition there is divergence between what governments decide to do and what they actually do. Public policy is a guide which government has developed for themselves and guides its public problem areas.

There are several implications of the concept of public policy as a collective public perspective system of action followed by government in dealing with some problems or issues of society. First the definition that policy is response or governmental action rather than to random behaviour or action taken by individuals. Public policy is collective political response to the, by challenge, that happens. They are instead change to accomplish specified goals or produce desired results, although there are always setbacks. Second, public policy consists of actions or patterns of action taken over time by governmental officials acting that they represent the public interests. Third,
