The Historic Landscape of Devon Lucy Ryder, 2013-04-30. The 19th century historic landscape of Devon developed from earlier patterns of landholdings and settlement that are today not always easily discernible on the ground. The study of Tithe Survey landholdings, field names, and associated documentary evidence together with the physical evidence of change and development through field and settlement pattern can be used to elucidate the relationship between field and settlement morphologies and patterns of 19th century landholding. The combined evidence for three case study areas, the Blackdown Hills, Hartland Moors, and the South Hams, is examined in detail, though the creation, manipulation, and querying of a Geographical Information Systems (GIS) database. Key issues addressed include how far back patterns of 19th century landholding can be traced or projected back into the medieval period, the occurrence and extent of open field farming in Devon, and the spread of nucleated and dispersed settlements. Looking beyond the physical aspects of landscapes, the idea of landscape pays and the identification of regional differences in the study of the historic landscape are investigated, revealing how closely entwined are the physical and social landscapes of this historic county.

significance the one as a possible gateway for a Russian invasion of Egypt the other as a potentially faster route to India This is the traditional explanation for the presence of the international powers in the region This important new book questions this view Through a study of two important projects of the time international efforts to determine the exact level of the Dead Sea and Chesney's Euphrates Expedition to find a quicker route to India Professor Goren shows how other forces than the interests of empire were involved He reveals the important role played by private individuals and establishes a wealth of new connections between the key players and he reveals for the first time an important Irish nexus The resulting work adds an important new dimension to our existing understanding of this period     Landscape and History since 1500 Ian D.

Whyte, 2004-03-03 Landscape and History explores a complex relationship over the past five centuries The book is international and interdisciplinary in scope drawing on material from social economic and cultural history as well as from geography archaeology cultural geography planning and landscape history In recent years as the author points out there has been increasing interest in and concern for many aspects of landscape within British European and wider contexts This has included the study of the history development and changes in our perception of landscape as well as research into the links between past landscapes and political ideologies economic and social structures cartography art and literature There is also considerable concern at present with the need to evaluate and classify historic landscapes and to develop policies for their conservation and management in relation to their scenic heritage and recreational value This is manifest not only in the designation of particularly valued areas with enhanced protection from planning developments such as national parks and world heritage sites but in the countryside more generally Further Ian D Whyte argues changes in European Union policies relating to agriculture with a greater concern for the protection and sustainable management of rural landscapes are likely to be of major importance in relation to the themes of continuity and change in the landscapes of Britain and Europe

Imperial spaces Lindsay Proudfoot, Dianne Hall, 2013-07-19 Imperial spaces takes two of the most influential minority groups of white settlers in the British Empire the Irish and the Scots and explores how they imagined themselves within the landscapes of its farthest reaches the Australian colonies of Victoria and New South Wales Using letters and diaries as well as records of collective activities such as committee meetings parades and dinners the book examines how the Irish and Scots built new identities as settlers in the unknown spaces of Empire Utilizing critical geographical theories of place as the site of memory and agency it considers how Irish and Scots settlers grounded their sense of belonging in the imagined landscapes of south east Australia Imperial spaces is relevant to academics and students interested in the history and geography of the British Empire Australia Ireland and Scotland
