Specialist Periodical Reports provide systematic and detailed review coverage of progress in the major areas of chemical research. Written by experts in their specialist fields, the series creates a unique service for the active research chemist, supplying regular, critical, in-depth accounts of progress in particular areas of chemistry. For over 80 years the Royal Society of Chemistry and its predecessor the Chemical Society have been publishing reports charting developments in chemistry, which originally took the form of Annual Reports. However, by 1967 the whole spectrum of chemistry could no longer be contained within one volume, and the series Specialist Periodical Reports was born. The Annual Reports themselves still existed but were divided into two, and subsequently three volumes covering Inorganic, Organic, and Physical Chemistry. For more general coverage of the highlights in chemistry, they remain a must. Since that time the SPR series has altered according to the fluctuating degree of activity in various fields of chemistry. Some titles have remained unchanged, while others have altered their emphasis, along with their titles, some have been combined under a new name, whereas others have had to be discontinued. The current list of Specialist Periodical Reports can be seen on the inside flap of this volume.

Innovation, Science, Environment 07/08 Carleton University. School of Public Policy and Administration, 2007 The impact of climate change is becoming increasingly obvious around the world but different levels of the Canadian government are failing to respond cohesively For example the Harper government immediately cut several liberal era environmental research programs and admitted that Canada has been moving away from Kyoto Protocol targets and that the Kyoto Protocol is not central to its idea of either good environmental or good energy policy Meanwhile a Quebec liberal government announced that it would introduce a carbon tax to reduce CO₂ emissions by 10 million tons by 2012 while Canada's mayors introduced their own climate change initiatives linking them to local infrastructure development This second volume in the ISE series examines the reshaping of ISE policy in the context of multi level governance and policy Contributors examine climate change policy innovation in the natural resources sector the internet pharmacy trade biotechnology policy and governance provincial government renewable energy policies the psychological and human nature connection with sustainable development policies procurement policy and innovation the Canadian Institutes of Health Research and the commercialization of Canada's universities
