Challenges of Personal Adjustment William C. Coe, 1972 The Psychology of Personal Adjustment Roger William Heyns, 1958 The Personal Adjustment of a Selected Group of Widows of Fifty-five Years and Older George Thornton Fitzelle, 1952 Report, 1959 Personality, Social, and Biological Perspectives on Personal Adjustment Bem P. Allen, 1990 Migration and Belonging A.A. Weinberg, 2012-12-06 by LOUIS GUTTMAN Fitting it is for the World Mental Health Year that a fundamental research monograph should appear devoted to one of the universal but perhaps inadequately recognized problems of our times mental health and personal adjustment problems of immigrants Many types of demographic data on migration are readily available from a variety of official sources Social scientists who have addressed

themselves to the subject have many plausible hypotheses about sociopsychological factors leading to migration and the effects of migration upon later adjustment. Conclusions based upon empirical psychological and psychiatric research are few and far between. Is it true that a person who is willing to depart his homeland voluntarily for another country must be better adjusted than others in order to be able to brave the idea of making the change? Or is the converse true? While it would be of great interest to study potential migrants before they leave and the conditions under which they leave, the present monograph is devoted to research at the other end of the problem: What type of immigrant adjusts well after arrival in the new country and under what conditions? The unusual situation of Israel in absorbing in a short span of time people from many countries of origin afforded a unique opportunity for this type of study.

Facilities through Young adults, 1974 Psychology of Personal Adjustment Fred McKinney, 1945 The Oxford Handbook of Multicultural Identity Veronica Benet-Martinez, Ying-Yi Hong, 2015-08-01. Multiculturalism is a prevalent worldwide societal phenomenon. Aspects of our modern life such as migration, economic globalization, multicultural policies and cross border travel and communication have made intercultural contacts inevitable. High numbers of multicultural individuals: 23-43% of the population by some estimates can be found in many nations where migration has been strong, e.g. Australia, U.S., Western Europe, Singapore, or where there is a history of colonization, e.g. Hong Kong. Many multicultural individuals are also ethnic and cultural minorities who are descendants of immigrants; majority individuals with extensive multicultural experiences or people with culturally mixed families, all people for whom identification and/or involvement with multiple cultures is the norm. Despite the prevalence of multicultural identity and experiences, until the publication of this volume, there has not yet been a comprehensive review of scholarly research on the psychological underpinning of multiculturalism. The Oxford Handbook of Multicultural Identity fills this void. It reviews cutting edge empirical and theoretical work on the psychology of multicultural identities and experiences. As a whole, the volume addresses some important basic issues such as measurement of multicultural identity, links between multilingualism and multiculturalism, the social psychology of multiculturalism and globalization as well as applied issues such as multiculturalism in counseling, education, policy, marketing and organizational science, to mention a few. This handbook will be useful for students, researchers and teachers in cultural, social, personality, developmental, acculturation and ethnic psychology. It can also be used as a source book in advanced undergraduate and graduate courses on identity and multiculturalism and a reference for applied psychologists and researchers in the domains of education, management and marketing.

People in Quandaries
Wendell Johnson, 1946 Vietnam Veterans' Readjustment United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Veterans' Affairs, 1980 Personal Styles in Neurosis (RLE: Group Therapy) T.M. Caine, O.B.A. Wijesinghe, D.A. Winter, 2014-09-19. Originally published in 1981, the inadequacies of the medical model for the understanding and psychological treatment of neuroses were widely recognized. A number of alternative approaches had arisen in response, but most of the models were theoretical and little experimental support was documented One of the most pressing needs at the time was for a system of classification which could predict the behaviour of different types of neurotic patient under different treatments and thus provide a framework for the selection of patients for small group psychotherapy and for behaviour therapy The authors of this title develop such a framework involving the matching of patient therapist and treatment according to certain adjustment strategies such as direction of interest conservatism convergent divergent thinking openness to inner experience and control The personal style of an individual is defined by these strategies and by the patient's expectations from treatment The authors collected a considerable amount of original research material over many years and their evidence demonstrates the fundamental importance of personal style in treatment allocation and response The new approach which they propose will be of interest not only to academic psychologists but to those in the mental health professions actively engaged in psychotherapy and behaviour therapy
