

HORNBLENDE

Symetry	-	Monoclinic (-) or (+)
RI β	-	1.618 - 1.714
Birefringence	-	0.014 - 0.026

The uper and middle photographs show brownish phenocrysts of hornblende along with plagioclase phenocrysts in a fine-grained groundmass mainly of alkali feldspar. The typical amphibole shape and cleavage can be seen in a few crystals and the pleochroism is quite pronounced. The opaque rims are probably due to the formation of magnetite by oxidation of iron, and are fairly common in hornblende in volcanic rocks.

The interference colours (lower photograph) tend to be obscured by the absorption colours; the birefringence of common hornblende is low to moderate. [167]
