or evolution With subtle variations among iterations we can create meaning out of repetitive acts forging narratives from them and thus making them meaningful to us Chow draws on rhetoric psychology narratology and design thinking to show both in theory and in practice how we can innovate the design of mundane and routine activities to give them meaning and expression He does so by examining Asian and European originated examples across a range of domains including visual arts literature digital art video games and mobile applications A must read for designers and enthusiasts looking for ways to innovate across all domains and media and transform tedious repetitive activities into acts of intention Children's Language K. E. Nelson, 2014-03-18 First published in 1983 This series Children's Language reflects the conviction that extensive work on entirely new fronts along with a great deal of reinterpretation of old front data will be necessary before any persuasive and truly orderly account of language For all volumes in the series there is a common scheme of operation with two tactics First to give authors sufficient planning time and freedom to arrive at a chapter length account of their area of thinking which vividly shows both the progress and the problems in that area with the author of each chapter free to find a workable proportion of new experimental contributions review and theory The second tactic concerns the selection of topics for each volume This is Volume 4 Structures about language and thought and children as employed in certain other fields may well be shaken and stimulated particularly in education sociology anthropology literature and language remediation publication contains papers presented at the XXVIII CIOSTA CIGR V International Congress on 14-17 June 1999 in Horsens Denmark. It presents the latest scientific results, ideas and possibilities within work science in order to stimulate the development of agriculture towards an improved level of sustainability. The following topics are dealt with: Systems Engineering, Development and Use of Computer Application, Working Environment and Integrated Farming. Systems Engineering and Integrated Farming are new concepts which have been generated in consequence of the current debate on sustainable farming. These concepts especially show consideration for the entirety of the individual farms. The use of computer programs as a tool for the daily management is in rapid progress within agriculture. Working Environment within agriculture is a frequently neglected subject which needs to be improved. All the above mentioned topics are dealt with from different points of view on the basis of different interpretations and characterised by the scientific topics that are relevant in the individual countries. In general, the presented papers, posters, videos and PC programs show great variations in how the labour research into sustainable farming is interpreted and carried out. But the general impression is that labour research related to future farming is an essential topic.

Piggery Waste Management Euiso Choi, 2007-08-31. Among animal wastes, piggery waste is the most troublesome. Pig production industries have been growing as the demand for pork meat has increased and as a result, the waste management problem of piggery waste will become more serious in the future. The land receiving the piggery wastes has already become over-saturated with Nitrogen and Phosphorus in many countries and the solution to the waste problem is further complicated as the land area utilised for disposal becomes restricted. This book identifies and characterises the key issues involved in dealing with the management of piggery waste and provides recommendations on sustainable treatment regimes. All the technologies available for the treatment of piggery waste are reviewed, including conventional and emerging technologies from composting and anaerobic digestion to nitrate nitrification and denitrification, Anammox, advanced oxidation, adsorption and membrane technologies. Design procedures for biological nitrogen removal are introduced together with temperature effects. Phosphorus removal characteristics as struvite and other biological forms are also reviewed. Integrated treatment schemes are discussed to build an understanding of the systems to achieve sustainable piggery waste management. Examples of integrated systems are presented, including recent modification of lagoon systems in the US, performances of energy recovery systems in Europe, wastewater treatment systems in Korea with limited land area as well as tropical experiences in Singapore and Malaysia. This work will be an invaluable source of information for all those concerned with the research and practice of animal waste treatment Practising engineers can use this work for planning design and operation of treatment plants and it will also be suitable as a reference for policy makers and planners
