Selected Papers on Agricultural Chemicals in Water Resources of the Midcontinental United States ,1993

Water-resources Investigations Report ,2003

Postflood Occurrence of Selected Agricultural Chemicals and Volatile Organic Compounds in Near-surface Unconsolidated Aquifers in the Upper Mississippi River Basin, 1993

Dana W. Kolpin,Earl Michael Thurman,1995 The historic stream flooding and intense rainfall across the upper Mississippi River Basin during summer 1993 had an immediate effect on near surface unconsolidated aquifers by raising the water levels closer to the land surface The objective of this study was to determine if this flooding also had immediate effects on ground water quality Water samples were collected during September and October 1993 from 110 wells completed in near surface unconsolidated aquifers and were analyzed for herbicides herbicide metabolites inorganic nutrients and volatile organic compounds The results of these samples were compared with those obtained during summer 1991 or 1992 Water samples from the Missouri River alluvial aquifer had a fourfold increase in the frequency of herbicide detection There also appears to be a relation between increases in total herbicide concentration and the occurrence of stream flooding near a well Water samples from wells that had at least a 20% increase in dissolved oxygen concentration had the greatest frequency of substantial changes in total herbicide concentration and substantial increases in nitrate concentration Water-resources

Agricultural Productivity Virgil Ball,2012-12-06 Agricultural Productivity Measurement and Sources of Growth addresses measurement issues and techniques in agricultural productivity analysis applying those techniques to recently published data sets for American agriculture The data sets are used to estimate and explain state level productivity and efficiency differences and to test different approaches to productivity measurement The rise in agricultural productivity is the single most important source of economic growth in the U S farm sector and the rate of productivity growth is estimated to be higher in agriculture than in the non farm sector It is important to understand productivity sources and to measure its growth properly including the effects of environmental externalities Both the methods and the data can be accessed by economists at the state level to conduct analyses for their own states In a sense although not explicitly the book provides a guide to using the productivity data available on the website of the U S Department of Agriculture Economic Research Service It should be of interest to a broad spectrum of professionals in academia the government and the private sector

The Management of Water Quality and Irrigation Technologies Jose Albiac,2012 This book is an outcome from the International Expo Water and Sustainable Development held in Zaragoza Spain in 2008 Support from the Spanish Ministry of Environment Caja Rioja Government of Aragon and the World Bank is acknowledged Few resources will play a more important role in shaping our economic future or face more daunting challenges than water This internationally acclaimed team of experts has produced a first rate volume that is full of intriguing practical ideas for meeting those challenges in a rich variety of institutional settings Tom Tietenberg Mitchell Family Professor of Economics Emeritus Colby College USA This volume brings together two critical but interrelated dimensions of water challenge i e water pollution particularly from non point sources and water conservation The editors are well known experts on the subject as are the contributors R Maria Saleth International Water Management Institute Sri Lanka and Associate Editor Water Policy The profound contribution of this volume is that it brings together various economic concepts and policy dilemmas regarding water shortages non point source pollution efficiency of water use and irrigation technology Recommended reading for anyone working in the area of water management Henk Folmer University of

Groningen and Wageningen University The Netherlands As countries face deteriorating water and environmental quality as well as water shortages pollution control and the efficiency of water use become of paramount importance Agriculture is one of the main non point polluters of water bodies and irrigation for agriculture is one of the main consumers of water While it is very hard to regulate pollution from agriculture attempts have been made via economic and command and control instruments and also through investments in technologies and ecosystems recovery Coping with non point pollution takes the form of both policy intervention and technology development Likewise it is recognized that irrigation efficiency varies across countries influenced by both technology and supporting adoption policies Countries that lead in irrigation technology and supporting policies have certain traits in common They face very high scarcity and are pushed to find innovative solutions both technical and policy related The recent multibillion investments in irrigation technologies in Spain and similar proposals in Australia for example highlight the potential of irrigation technologies to cope with scarcity and water quality degradation This book reviews all of the above issues presents experiences in selected countries and assesses the degree of success of alternative policies for coping with non point water pollution and improving irrigation efficiency
