inventing new forms of worker representation and power      Making EI Work Keith Banting, Jon Medow, 2013-04-08 Since the inception and design of Canada's Employment Insurance (EI) program the Canadian economy and labour market have undergone dramatic changes. It is clear that EI has not kept pace with those changes and experts and advocates agree that the program is no longer effective or equitable. Making EI Work is the result of a panel of distinguished scholars gathered by the Mowat Centre Employment Insurance Task Force to analyze the strengths, weaknesses, and future directions of EI. The authors identify the strengths and weaknesses of the system and consider how it could be improved to better and more fairly support those in need. They make suggestions for facilitating a more efficient Canadian labour market and meeting the human capital requirements of a dynamic economy for the present and the foreseeable future. The chapters that comprise Making EI Work informed the task force's final recommendations and form an engaging dialogue that makes the case for and defines the parameters of a reformed support system for Canada's unemployed. Contributors examine the functioning of social cohesion at multiple levels. Standard approaches are challenged by highlighting the experiences of women and non-Canadians. Attempts to construct corporate forms of cohesion and community efforts to forge cohesion via the new cultural economy are investigated, while the relationship between cohesion in Canada and the international environment is examined by considering the international activity of Canadian civic actors, the failure of Canada to live up to international labour obligations, and the implications of International Labour Organization reforms for informal sector workers. Solidarity First concludes by arguing that reinvigorated worker solidarity is a prerequisite to moving toward a more worker-friendly form of social cohesion.      Interrogating the New Economy Norene Pupo, Mark Preston Thomas, 2010-01-01 This collection
