forefathers had used a complex system of raised fields and irrigation canals to obtain high yields from their crops. This technology seems to have been lost after the Spanish conquest. The Peruvian and Bolivian governments as well as international NGOs which have set about reintroducing this system of farming along with the traditional Andean crops such as quinoa, canihua and amaranth. This book presents a critical analysis of these raised field projects setting them in context and taking into consideration factors such as agrarian reforms and counter reforms, the psychology of aid dependency and the limited remit of the agencies. It shows that very few of the raised field projects have led to permanent cultivation and explains the failures in terms of a variety of standard factors, a more integrated approach which recognizes the integrated nature of society and economy in the traditional communities and the existence of a rounded Andean technology of which the raised fields comprise only one part. Colin Wilson, the First Fifty Years Colin Stanley, 2006.
