Protected Area Management:

Integrated Protected Area Management Michael Walkey, Ian R. Swingland, Shaun Russell, 2012-12-06 Protected areas have become an increasingly important tool both in the conservation of biodiversity and in revenue generation through sustainable use. This is the only sure way to guarantee the protection necessary for many species habitats and ecosystems in the future. Integrated Protected Area Management features contributions that consider the design, management, and sustainable use of these regions. Three principal aspects are considered: the theory and practice of designation, community-based conservation, and the concept of sustainability, identifying priorities for management. The emphasis throughout is on the importance of an interdisciplinary approach to planning and the active involvement of all stakeholders in decision-making processes as a means of ensuring long-term sustainability.

National System Planning for Protected Areas Adrian G. Davey, 1998 A system plan is the design of a total reserve system covering the full range of ecosystems and communities found in a particular country, identifying the range of purposes of protected areas and the relationships among the system components, i.e. individual areas, protected areas, and other land uses, and different sectors and levels of society. Highlighting key linkages with other aspects of economic development, it shows how various stakeholders can interact and cooperate to support effective and sustainable management of protected areas and help to establish priorities. A valuable resource for all those involved with national system planning.

Guidelines for Applying Protected Area Management Categories Nigel Dudley, 2008 IUCN's Protected Areas Management Categories, which classify protected areas according to their management objectives, are today accepted as the benchmark for defining, recording, and classifying protected areas. They are recognized by international bodies such as the United Nations, as well as many national governments. As a result, they are increasingly being incorporated into government legislation. These guidelines provide as much clarity as possible regarding the meaning and application of the Categories. They describe the definition of the Categories and discuss application in particular biomes and management approaches.

Protected Area Management Graeme Worboys, Michael Lockwood, Terry De Lacy, 2005 Protected Area Management: Principles and Practice 2e examines the multi-disciplinary task of managing protected areas. This second edition of this authoritative text has been updated, expanded, and includes new Australian and international case studies.

Protected Area Management Barbara Sladonja,2012-08-08 Protected areas are at the base of the most national and international conservation strategies Due to the many unpredictable elements in ecology matters each protected area requires a case specific set of guidelines but a common issue is how to cope with human interaction The management of protected areas is replete with challenges and the only way to gain understanding and achieve greater management possibilities is to exchange experiences and knowledge Environmental managers are aware of that and together with scientists are looking for more modern and better solutions both with respect to natural resources and human interactions in many issues regarding nature protection This publication presents reviews and research results on protected areas management as well as 12 case studies derived from around the world with the aim of improving management effectiveness of the protected areas

Evaluating Effectiveness Marc Hockings,Sue Stolton,Nigel Dudley,2000 This publication proposes a framework for assessing management effectiveness recognising the need for a variety of responses depending on needs and resources It aims to help all those who wish to assess protected areas both in suggesting what needs to be done and in providing some guidelines It includes six practical case studies from Australia the Congo Basin Central America South America and the USA

Protected Area Management Mohd. Nazip Suratman,2022 Management Guidelines for IUCN Category V Protected Areas Adrian Phillips,2002 Protected Landscapes IUCN Protected Area Category V are lived in working landscapes In the past there has been a tendency to see them as a rather Eurocentric approach to protected areas but increasingly the category is being designated in other parts of the world including in a number of developing countries The Guidelines include sections on the background and on the planning of such areas and chapters on the principles policies process and the means for their management The text includes more than twenty case studies from more than fifteen countries in every region of the world

Guidelines for protected area management planning Karadeniz N., Yenilmez Arpa, N.,2022-07-01 Management planning guidelines represent the second major step in the process for planning protected areas following implementation of the Establishment Guidelines This publication was developed as a part of the Conservation and Sustainable Management of Turkeys Steppe Ecosystem Project It is the one of seven sets of guidelines designed for the development of recommendations and strategies for the management of the country's natural assets. These guidelines are based on international and national standards and are divided into 15 steps for successful management. A fundamental pre-condition for any form of management planning is clear definition of the overall management objectives to be achieved. These management objectives are linked to the IUCN protected area categories which form the basis for the guidelines. Important recommendations for successful management include the creation of thematic preparatory maps on topography, habitats, borders and zones, and habitat-based planning. The guidelines provide basic recommendations for the integration of global trends and requirements connected with nature conservation and protected areas into the protected area management process. A central element of this process is the management plan which sets out the management approach and goals together with a framework for decision-making to be applied in the protected area over a given period of time. The management plan is usually valid for a period of 10 years but may include a mid-term review. Changes can only be made to the plan on the basis of ecological or natural reasons.

Protected Area Management Mohd Nazip Suratman, 2022-03-16. Until recently, values and benefits from protected areas have often been underestimated as well as taken for granted. Protected Area Management: Recent Advances demonstrates that there are deep necessities in how the wider scientific, environmental, socioeconomic and cultural values that these natural ecosystems provide should increasingly be recognized. The book highlights various approaches for managing and conserving protected areas to respond to some pressing global challenges such as climate change, demand for food and energy, overexploitation and habitat change. It addresses these issues in five main sections that cover biodiversity and genetic resources, protected marine areas, community ecotourism and protected areas, and protected area conservation and monitoring.

Guidelines For Management Planning Of Protected Areas Lee Thomas, Julie Middleton, 2003. A Management Plan is a document which sets out the management approach and goals together with a framework for decision-making to apply in a specific protected area over a given period of time. Critical to the plan is the widest possible consultation with stakeholders and the development of objectives that can be agreed and adhered to by all who have an interest in the use and ongoing survival of the area concerned. These Guidelines, based on global best practice drawn from many areas around the world, represent a working framework for protected area planners to consider and adapt to their needs and circumstances.

Guidelines for applying the IUCN protected area management categories to marine protected areas, Local Livelihoods and Protected Area Management Emmanuel Neba Ndenecho, 2011. Cameroon's tropical forest is home to numerous plants and animals. It is also inhabited by Baka pygmies who are foragers and Bantu farmers. These communities have developed forest-dependent livelihoods, cultures and religions. Destruction of the forest by commercial and state interests, subsistence agriculture and the harvesting of products has necessitated a considerable upsurge in environmental protection projects to conserve and rehabilitate ecosystems forests soils and water resources Ultimately the approach to conservation that is applied is the responsibility of the government and international development agencies The case studies documented seek to demonstrate that a broader perspective linking environmental protection and human welfare is important for two reasons First it addresses the rights and needs of local people and more marginal groups in society Second it also ensures that fundamental conservation objectives are achieved in practice with the participation of local people The book develop guidelines for a more integrative and socially aware approach to environmental planning and project design and implementation It outlines a participatory mapping procedure for the design and implementation of community forest programmes This is a valuable book for land resource managers environmentalists environmental biologists conservators field workers and technicians involved with environmental conservation With the professionalisation of courses in most universities the book will constitute good reading for students of geography biology agriculture forestry botany and natural resource management
