

Scenario – Sexual Abuse 1

Discuss the scenario on the following page with staff and work through the questions together.

What are your current concerns?

Staff should identify that there are several indicators that point towards both neglect and/or sexual abuse. These are:

- History of recorded neglect (e.g. poor clothing, recurring illnesses, poor sanitation resulting in flea bites)
- A range of other adults living in the home coupled with inadequate supervision
- Jesse fidgets and appears to have an itchy bottom/genitals
- Jesse tells you they can do whatever they like when relatives visit (inadequate supervision)
- Jesse's mother says the itching is probably due to fleas again – she could be unaware of what's taking place, be part of the abuse or allowing it to happen, therefore failing to protect Jesse from harm
- Jesse acts out sexualised behaviour on other pupils
- Jesse tells you they've seen videos of naked people and was shown it by their cousin
- Jesse seems to be unaware that what they've done is wrong

Like in many incidents of child abuse, several types of abuse can occur simultaneously. At times, this can make what appears to be happening seem more or less severe than what's actually occurring. For example, in this scenario, it's feasible that Jesse's indicators are a result of neglect until they speak about the video at the very end. Even the humping that Jesse acts out could be attributed to the fact there are many dogs in the household. This is why practitioners should always be curious, maintain an attitude of "it could happen here" and ask non-leading questions to gain a true picture of what's taking place.

What are your immediate next steps?

You should ensure staff can detail the appropriate safeguarding procedures in your setting and how they'd follow them. This is a good opportunity to discuss how staff can take a disclosure effectively, including taking as much time as needed to listen to the pupil, showing care and empathy, and speaking carefully to not retraumatise a pupil. Ensure staff know how/where to record this information and how they would pass it on to the safeguarding team.

There's also the opportunity to discuss whether this scenario would reach a threshold for social care involvement. Make staff aware that in cases where there could be a criminal case (e.g. child sexual abuse), you do not always need to inform parents/carers that you are making a referral to children's social care. If in any doubt about this, it is advisable to contact your local safeguarding/social care team to ask for clarity on the referral process.

Would you share this information with anyone or consider taking any further action?

Consider whether Jesse's parents would be spoken to and whether doing so would put them at further risk of harm. Would staff want to put anything into place for Jesse, such as pastoral support? What consideration could be given to the pupils who Jesse carried out the sexual acts on?

With hindsight, could anything have been done differently in this scenario?
