trying to maintain professional objective distance will merely ensure that the social worker becomes part of the problem rather than part of the solution For the social worker in a smaller community Whose side are you one is the most important question to be answered before any effective work can be done It is an indictment of the slow pace of progress against the societal problems facing rural populations that a third edition of Social Work with Rural Peoples is necessary Rural social work Richard Pugh,Brian Cheers,2010-02-10 In much of the West the concerns of rural people are marginalised and rural issues neglected This stimulating book draws upon a rich variety of material to show why rural social work is such a challenging field of practice It incorporates research from different disciplines and places to provide an accessible and comprehensive introduction to rural practice The first part of the book focuses upon the experience of rurality The second part of the book turns to the development of rural practice reviewing different ways of working from casework through to community development This book is relevant to planners managers and practitioners not only in social work but also in other welfare services such as health and youth work who are likely to face similar challenges The State Department's Responsibility for the Development of Social Work Practice in Rural Areas ; Interviews with Rural Social Workers and Laymen in Rural Communities ; a Rural Case History Elizabeth McCord,Wilma Van Dusseldorp,Sybil Pease,United States. Social Work and the Environment Michael Kim Zapf, 2009 This ground breaking new work provides a detailed and extensive comparison of how the physical environment has been conceptualized in social work and other professions and offers a new and attractive foundational metaphor for social work The author acknowledges the need for greater awareness and action regarding environmental impacts and the book promotes more comprehensive notions of responsibility identity and stewardship that lead to a dynamic metaphor of people as place as the foundation for relevant social work practice in the early 21st century Why is that a profession with a declared focus on person in environment has been so silent on the environmental crisis Mainstream social work theory has narrowed the understanding of environment to include merely the social environment but this approach is no longer sufficient for participation in multi disciplinary efforts to tackle urgent environmental issues Transformative notions of responsibility identity and stewardship have been developed on the fringes of our professional community rural remote social workers Aboriginal social workers and international and spiritual social workers They must now move to the core of the profession
