Making Iron And Steel Independent Mills In Pittsburgh 1820 19:

Making Iron Steel John N. Ingham, 2015-12-18 John Ingham's in depth examination of small and mid sized Pittsburgh steel mills during the age of Carnegie challenges business historians traditional view that nineteenth century industrial development followed a linear pattern progressing from a handicraft stage to large scale mass production In the steel industry this pattern was best exemplified by Andrew Carnegie but while Carnegie's pattern became the stereotype for the entire industry Ingham argues that his case was actually unique In Making Iron and Steel John Ingham introduces the intricate densely textured world of nineteenth century entrepreneurs He observes how those in Pittsburgh handled Carnegie's challenge and the challenge of the mammoth large batch mass production techniques he pioneered He also studies those few who compete directly with Carnegie as well as the larger number who found quieter more isolated corners of the market in which they practiced a slower steadier but highly successful form of market response Finally Ingham shows that the owners of the small iron and steel companies exercised considerable social and cultural influence constituting a large proportion of Pittsburgh's social upper class and influencing the boards of directors of many major manufacturing and banking institutions This in turn translated into political and cultural influence Making Iron and Steel is one of the few business history studies that looks at the masses of smaller and medium sized businessmen and the world in which they worked John N Ingham is Professor of History at the University of Toronto His previous works include Contemporary American Business Leaders The Biographical Dictionary of American Business Leaders and The Iron Barons

Making Industrial Pittsburgh Modern Edward K. Muller, Joel A. Tarr, 2019-10-22 Pittsburgh's explosive industrial and population growth between the mid nineteenth century and the Great Depression required constant attention to city building Private profit oriented firms often with government involvement provided necessary transportation energy resources and suitable industrial and residential sites Meeting these requirements in the region's challenging hilly topographical and riverine environment resulted in the dramatic reshaping of the natural landscape At the same time the Pittsburgh region's free market private enterprise emphasis created socio economic imbalances and badly polluted the air water and land Industrial stagnation temporarily interrupted by wars and then followed deindustrialization inspired the formation of powerful public private partnerships to address the region's mounting infrastructural economic and social problems The sixteen essays in Making Industrial Pittsburgh Modern examine important aspects of the modernizing efforts to make Pittsburgh and Southwestern Pennsylvania a successful metropolitan region The city building experiences continue to influence the region's economic transformation spatial structure and life experience

Pittsburgh Rising Edward K. Muller, Rob Ruck, 2023-05-16 Over 170 years Pittsburgh rose from remote outpost to industrial powerhouse With the formation of the United States the frontier town located at the confluence of three rivers grew into the linchpin for trade and migration between established eastern cities and the growing settlements of the Ohio Valley Resources geography innovation and personalities led to successful glass iron and eventually steel operations As Pittsburgh blossomed into one of the largest cities in the country and became a center of industry it generated great wealth for industrial and banking leaders But immigrants and African American migrants who labored under insecure poorly paid and dangerous conditions did not share in the rewards of growth Pittsburgh Rising traces the lives of individuals and families who lived and worked in this early industrial city jammed into unhealthy housing in overcrowded neighborhoods near the mills Although workers organized labor unions to improve conditions and charitable groups and reform organizations often helmed by women mitigated some of the deplorable conditions authors Muller and Ruck show that divides along class religious ethnic and racial lines weakened the efforts to improve the inequalities of early twentieth century Pittsburgh and persist today Pittsburgh Surveyed Maurine Greenwald, Margo Anderson, 1996-10-15 At the beginning of the century Pittsburgh was the center of one of the nation's most powerful industries iron and steel It was also the site of an unprecedented effort to study the effects of industry on one American city The Pittsburgh Survey 1909-1914 brought together statisticians social workers engineers lawyers physicians economists labor investigators city planners and photographers They documented Pittsburgh's degraded environment corrupt civic institutions and exploited labor force and made a compelling case in four books and two collections of articles for reforming corporate capitalism In its literary history and visual power breadth and depth the Pittsburgh Survey remains an undisputed classic of social science research Like the Lynds Middletown studies of the 1920s the Survey captured the nation's attention and Pittsburgh came to symbolize the problems and way of life of industrial America as a whole A landmark volume in its own right this book of thirteen essays examines the accuracy and impact of the Pittsburgh Survey both on social science as a discipline and on Pittsburgh itself It also places the Survey firmly in the context of the social reform movement of the early twentieth century Duquesne and the Rise of Steel Unionism James Douglas Rose, 2001 Not all workers' needs were served by the union Focusing on the steel works at Duquesne Pennsylvania a linchpin of the old Carnegie Steel Company empire and then of U.S. Steel James D. Rose demonstrates the pivotal role played by a nonunion form of employee representation usually dismissed as a flimsy front for management interests The early New Deal set in motion two versions of workplace representation that battled for supremacy company sponsored employee representation plans ERPs and independent trade unionism At Duquesne the cause of the unskilled hourly workers mostly eastern and southern Europeans as well as blacks was taken up by the union the Fort Dukane Lodge of the Amalgamated Association of Iron Steel and Tin Workers For skilled tonnage workers and skilled tradesmen mainly U.S. born and of northern and western European extraction ERPs offered a better solution Initially little more than a crude antiunion device ERPs matured from tools of the company into semi-independent worker-led organizations Isolated from the union movement through the mid 1930s ERP representatives and management nonetheless created a sophisticated bargaining structure that represented the shop floor interests of the mill's skilled workforce Meanwhile the Amalgamated gave way to the Steel Workers Organizing Committee a professionalized and tightly organized affiliate of John L Lewis s CIO that expended huge resources trying to gain companywide unionization Even when the SWOC secured a collective bargaining agreement with U S Steel in 1937 however the Union was still unable to sign up a majority of the workforce at Duquesne A sophisticated study of the forces that shaped and responded to workers interests Duquesne and the Rise of Steel Unionism confirms that what people did on the shop floor was as critical to the course of steel unionism as were corporate decision making and shifts in government policy Steel and Steelworkers John Hinshaw,2012-02-01 Steel and Steelworkers is a fascinating account of the forces that shaped Pittsburgh big business and labor through the city s rapid industrialization in the mid nineteenth century its lengthy era of industrial maturity its precipitous deindustrialization toward the end of the twentieth century and its reinvention from hell with the lid off to America s most livable post industrial city Hinshaw examined a wide variety of company union and government documents oral histories and newspapers to reconstruct the steel industry and the efforts of labor business and government to refashion it A compelling report of industrialization and deindustrialization in which questions of organization power and politics prove as important as economics Steel and Steelworkers shows the ways in which big business and labor helped determine the fate of steel and Pittsburgh American Iron, 1607-1900 Robert B. Gordon,2020-03-24 Winner of the Professional and Scholarly Publishing Award for General Engineering from the Association of American Publishers Originally published in 1996 By applying their abundant natural resources to ironmaking early in the eighteenth century Americans soon made themselves felt in world markets After the Revolution ironmakers supplied the materials necessary to the building of American industry pushing the fuel efficiency and productivity of their furnaces far ahead of their European rivals In American Iron 1607 1900 Robert B Gordon draws on recent archaeological findings as well as archival research to present an ambitious comprehensive survey of iron technology in America from the colonial period to the industry s demise at about the turn of the twentieth century Closely examining the techniques the hows of ironmaking in its various forms Gordon offers new interpretations of labor innovation and product quality in ironmaking along with references to the industry s environmental consequences He establishes the high level of skills required to ensure efficient and safe operation of furnaces and to improve the quality of iron product By mastering founding fining puddling or bloom smelting ironworkers gained a degree of control over their lives not easily attained by others Mastering Iron Anne Kelly Knowles,2013-01-15 Veins of iron run deep in the history of America Iron making began almost as soon as European settlement with the establishment of the first ironworks in colonial Massachusetts Yet it was Great Britain that became the Atlantic world s dominant low cost high volume producer of iron a position it retained throughout the nineteenth century It was not until after the Civil War that American iron producers began to match the scale and efficiency of the British iron industry In Mastering Iron Anne Kelly Knowles argues that the prolonged development of the US iron industry was largely due to geographical problems the British did not face Pairing exhaustive manuscript research with analysis of a detailed geospatial database that she built of the industry Knowles reconstructs the American iron industry in unprecedented depth from locating hundreds of iron companies in their social and environmental contexts to explaining workplace culture and social relations between workers and managers She demonstrates how ironworks in Alabama Maryland Pennsylvania and Virginia struggled to replicate British technologies but in the attempt brought about changes in the American industry that set the stage for the subsequent age of steel Richly illustrated with dozens of original maps and period art work all in full color Mastering Iron sheds new light on American ambitions and highlights the challenges a young nation faced as it grappled with its geographic conditions Making Iron and Steel John N. Ingham,1991 A Nation of Steel Thomas J. Misa,1998-09-04 From the age of railroads through the building of the first battleships from the first skyscrapers to the dawning of the age of the automobile steelmakers proved central to American industry building and transportation In A Nation of Steel Thomas Misa explores the complex interactions between steelmaking and the rise of the industries that have characterized modern America A Nation of Steel offers a detailed and fascinating look at an industry that has had a profound impact on American life
