Protecting Our Forces Improving Vaccine Acquisition And Availability In The U S Military:

Protecting Our Forces Institute of Medicine, Medical Follow-up Agency, Committee on a Strategy for Minimizing the Impact of Naturally Occurring Infectious Diseases of Military Importance: Vaccine Issues in the U.S. Military, 2002-10-25 Infectious diseases continue to pose a substantial threat to the operational capacity of military forces Protecting Our Forces reviews the process by which the U S military acquires vaccines to protect its warfighters from natural infectious disease threats The committee found that poorly aligned acquisition processes and an inadequate commitment of financial resources within the Department of Defense vaccine acquisition process rather than uncleared scientific or technological hurdles contribute to the unavailability of some vaccines that could protect military personnel and implicitly the welfare and security of the nation Protecting Our Forces outlines ways in which DoD might strengthen its acquisition process and improve vaccine availability Recommendations which include combining all DoD vaccine acquisition responsibilities under a single DoD authority cover four broad aspects of the acquisition process 1 organization authority and responsibility 2 program and budget 3 manufacturing 4 and the regulatory status of special use vaccines Protecting Our Forces Thaul S. Biodefense Research Supporting the DoD Coleen K. Martinez, 2007 Protecting the Frontline in Biodefense Research National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Life Sciences, Committee on Special Immunizations Program for Laboratory Personnel Engaged in Research on Countermeasures for Select Agents, 2011-07-23 The U S Army's Special Immunizations Program is an important component of an overall biosafety program for laboratory workers at risk of exposure to hazardous pathogens The program provides immunizations to scientists laboratory technicians and other support staff who work with certain hazardous pathogens and toxins Although first established to serve military personnel the program was expanded through a cost sharing agreement in 2004 to include other government and civilian workers reflecting the expansion in biodefense research in recent years Protecting the Frontline in Biodefense Research examines issues related to the expansion of the Special Immunizations Program considering the regulatory frameworks under which the vaccines are administered how additional vaccines might be considered for inclusion in the Program and factors that might influence the development and manufacturing of vaccines for the Special Immunizations Program Essentials of Health Policy and Law Joel B. Teitelbaum, Sara E. Wilensky, 2016-02-21 Essentials of Health Policy and Law helps readers understand the broad context of health policy and law the essential policy and legal issues impacting and flowing out of the health care and public health systems and the way health policies and laws are formulated Important Notice The digital edition of this book is missing some of the images or content found in the physical edition Giving Full Measure to Countermeasures National Research Council, Institute of Medicine, Board on Life Sciences, Medical Follow-up Agency, Committee on Accelerating the Research, Development, and Acquisition of Medical Countermeasures Against Biological Warfare Agents, 2004-04-06 In recent years substantial efforts have been initiated to develop new drugs vaccines and other medical interventions against biological agents that could be used in bioterrorist attacks against civilian populations According to a new congressionally mandated report from the Institute of Medicine and National Research Council of the National Academies to successfully develop these drugs vaccines and other medical interventions against biowarfare agents Congress should authorize the creation of a new agency within the Office of the Secretary of the U S Department of Defense The committee recommended that Congress should improve liability protections for those who develop and manufacture these products to stimulate willingness to invest in new research and development for biowarfare protection Giving Full Measure to Countermeasures also identifies other challenges such as the need for appropriate animal models and laboratories equipped with high level biosafety protections that will require attention if DoD efforts to develop new medical countermeasures are to be successful

The Childhood Immunization Schedule and Safety Institute of Medicine, Board on Population Health and Public Health Practice, Committee on the Assessment of Studies of Health Outcomes Related to the Recommended Childhood Immunization Schedule, 2013-03-27 Vaccines are among the most safe and effective public health interventions to prevent serious disease and death Because of the success of vaccines most Americans today have no firsthand experience with such devastating illnesses as polio or diphtheria Health care providers who vaccinate young children follow a schedule prepared by the U S Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices Under the current schedule children younger than six may receive as many as 24 immunizations by their second birthday New vaccines undergo rigorous testing prior to receiving FDA approval however like all medicines and medical interventions vaccines carry some risk Driven largely by concerns about potential side effects there has been a shift in some parents attitudes toward the child immunization schedule The Childhood Immunization Schedule and Safety identifies research approaches methodologies and study designs that could address questions about the safety of the current schedule This report is the most comprehensive examination of the immunization schedule to date The IOM authoring committee uncovered no evidence of major safety concerns associated with adherence to the childhood immunization schedule Should signals arise that there may be need for investigation however the report offers a framework for conducting safety research using existing or new data collection systems
