AMILLA Robert B Koehl, 2013-07-31 Contributions by 34 scholars are brought together here to create a volume in honor of the long and fruitful career of Guenter Kopcke who is the Avalon Foundation Professor in the Humanities at the Institute of Fine Arts New York University Articles pertain to various topics on the ancient art architecture and archaeology of the greater Eastern Mediterranean region from Pre Dynastic Egypt to the Bronze Age Aegean and Anatolia Cyprus and the Near East and Etruscan Italy Antiquity Osbert Guy Stanhope Crawford, 2002 Includes section Reviews Minoan Buildings in Areas B, C, D, and F Philip P. Betancourt, Costis Davaras, 2015-09-30 This is the fourth volume in a series of final publications on the joint American Greek archaeological excavations at Pseira in northeast Crete The site is a seaport dating from the end of the Final Neolithic until the Late Minoan period Pseira IV publishes the architecture and associated finds from 39 locations in Areas B C D and F in the Minoan town of Pseira The Bronze Age settlement is located on Pseira Island off the coast of Crete in the Gulf of Mirabello Pseira IV The Minoan Buildings on the West Side of Area A Eleni S. Banou, 1995 Pseira a tiny islet near the coast of eastern Crete has been called a priceless jewel in Crete s archaeological crown In 1906 and 1907 the American archaeologist Richard Seager unearthed the extensive remains of a Bronze Age village on Pseira Little was known about this site until a joint Greek American project directed by Philip P Betancourt and Costis Davaras returned to the island in 1985 This is the first volume in a series of final publications on the joint American Greek archaeological excavations at Pseira in northeast Crete The site is a seaport dating from the end of the Final Neolithic until the Late Minoan period This volume presents a series of houses whose main period of occupation is Late Minoan IB The architecture is constructed of stone and remarkably well preserved The text includes detailed catalog entries profile drawings and stone by stone architectural plans The Architecture of Pseira John C. McEnroe, Kōstēs Davaras, 2001 Pseira a tiny islet near the coast of eastern Crete has been called a priceless jewel in Crete s archaeological crown In 1906 and 1907 the American archaeologist Richard Seager unearthed the extensive remains of a Bronze Age village on Pseira Little was known about this site until a joint Greek American project directed by Philip P Betancourt and Costis Davaras returned to the island in 1985 after initial efforts by Davaras in 1970 In this volume the project architect John C McEnroe presents the first thorough analysis of the architecture of this important village In addition to providing new information concerning building materials and techniques the layout of domestic architecture and the organization of Minoan villages this volume unravels the complex history of architecture at the site By correlating archaeological stratigraphy building sequences and dates provided by ceramic evidence McEnroe demonstrates that the Late Bronze Age town evolved through a series of three main phases An extensive series of plans and photographs presents a complete visual record and will form the basis for all future studies of the site Along with nearby Gournia Pseira is the most extensively excavated Minoan village remaining today This volume will be of interest to archaeologists and to those concerned with the history of vernacular architecture and the history of Crete

University Museum Monograph 109 The Minoan Buildings on the West Side of Area A, 1995 Pseira III Cheryl R. Floyd, Philip P. Betancourt, Costis Davaras, 1999-01-29 This third volume in the series of publications on the Minoan site of Pseira focuses on the Plateia building discovered in 1986 Building DA Jane Hickman, 2000 Pseira X Philip P. Betancourt, 2009 This book is the tenth volume in the series of excavation reports about the harbor town of Pseira which is located on the island of the same name just off the northeast coast of Crete The book focuses on the excavation and interpretation of the architecture and material culture in Block AF This southern group of buildings is one of the most important areas in the settlement because of its long succession of building phases Block AF provides the fullest sequence of building phases from any one area at Pseira with habitation extending from before MM II to LM III It has examples of complex architectural details including a pillar crypt elaborate upstairs floors a well preserved U shaped staircase and a well designed kitchen all of which contribute significantly to our knowledge of East Cretan building practices In addition to domestic pottery the houses furnish examples of stone tools stone vessels loom weights inscriptions in Linear A cult objects animal bones marine shells and a wide range of material recovered from water sieving This latter category with burned grain fish bones shells and other categories of materials fills many gaps in our knowledge of Pseiran life Palaces of Minoan Crete Gerald Cadogan, 1980 The Cretan archaeological landscape is adorned with the ruins of several major prehistoric palaces The Minoans began building palaces around 1900 BC to act as cultural religious administrative and commercial centers for their increasingly expanding society The Minoan palaces provided a forum for gathering and celebrations while at the same time they offered storage for the crops and workshops for the artists They were built over time to occupy low hills at strategic places around the island in a manner so complex that they resembled labyrinths to outside visitors The Minoan palaces were technologically advanced with expanded drainage systems irrigation aqueducts and deep wells that provided fresh water to the inhabitants The multi storied palace buildings were laced with impressive interior and exterior staircases light wells massive columns storage magazines and gathering outdoor places the precursor to ancient theaters The construction method consisted of rough stones and ceramic bricks connected by mortar in the interior walls while the corners of the buildings were fashioned by sharply defined large rectangular blocks None of the Minoan palaces unearthed to date was surrounded by defensive walls a testament to the Minoan supremacy at sea The Minoan palaces are Knossos Malia Phaistos and Zakros Http www.ancientgreece.org/architecture/minoan/archi.html Minoan Architecture Louise Hitchcock, 2000 Pseira III Cheryl R. Floyd, Kōstēs Davaras, 1998 The Palace of Minos: pt. I. Fresh lights on origins and external relations: the restoration in town and palace after seismic catastrophe towards close of M.M. III, and the beginnings of the new era. pt. II. Town-houses in Knossos of the new era and restored west palace section, with its state approach Sir Arthur Evans, 1928 The Palace of Minos Sir Arthur Evans, 1928 Minoan Architecture and Urbanism Quentin Letesson, Carl Knappett, 2017-06-30 Minoan Crete is rightly famous for its idiosyncratic

architecture as well as its palaces and towns such as Knossos Malia Gournia and Palaikastro Indeed these are often described as the first urban settlements of Bronze Age Europe However we still know relatively little about the dynamics of these early urban centres How did they work What role did the palaces have in their towns and the towns in their landscapes It might seem that with such richly documented architectural remains these questions would have been answered long ago Yet analysis has mostly found itself confined to building materials and techniques basic formal descriptions and functional evaluations Critical evaluation of these data as constituting a dynamic built environment has thus been slow in coming This volume aims to provide a first step in this direction It brings together international scholars whose research focuses on Minoan architecture and urbanism as well as on theory and methods in spatial analyses By combining methodological contributions with detailed case studies across the different scales of buildings settlements and regions the volume proposes a new analytical and interpretive framework for addressing the complex dynamics of the Minoan built environment

Architecture of Minoan Crete John C. McEnroe, 2010-05-15 Ever since Sir Arthur Evans first excavated at the site of the Palace at Knossos in the early twentieth century scholars and visitors have been drawn to the architecture of Bronze Age Crete Much of the attraction comes from the geographical and historical uniqueness of the island Equidistant from Europe the Middle East and Africa Minoan Crete is on the shifting conceptual border between East and West and chronologically suspended between history and prehistory In this culturally dynamic context architecture provided more than physical shelter it embodied meaning Architecture was a medium through which Minoans constructed their notions of social ethnic and historical identity the buildings tell us about how the Minoans saw themselves and how they wanted to be seen by others Architecture of Minoan Crete is the first comprehensive study of the entire range of Minoan architecture including houses palaces tombs and cities from 7000 BC to 1100 BC John C McEnroe synthesizes the vast literature on Minoan Crete with particular emphasis on the important discoveries of the past twenty years to provide an up to date account of Minoan architecture His accessible writing style skillful architectural drawings of houses and palaces site maps and color photographs make this book inviting for general readers and visitors to Crete as well as scholars

A Handbook to the Palace of Minos at Knossos John Devitt Stringfellow Pendlebury, 1969 Kommos Joseph W. Shaw, Maria C.

Shaw, 2005-10-01 Kommos an ancient site on the island of Crete is known both for its important Greek sanctuary and for its earlier role as a major Minoan harbor town This final book in the Princeton series focuses on the results of several decades of excavation at three of the site's monumental public buildings during the Minoan period Of these one has the characteristics of a Minoan palace a large central court surrounded by wings Two stoas on either side of the court may have accommodated spectators watching formal events unfold within the court Other rooms were used for storage Vessels from the palace but also and mainly from two buildings that succeeded it in the fourteenth century BC originate elsewhere in the Aegean and as far as Anatolia Cyprus Egypt Syro Palestine and Sardinia attesting to the site's major role in international trade One of the later buildings is characterized by six huge rectangular spaces that were likely used to shelter ships during the nonsailing months. This kind of structure from that period has never before been found in Crete. Equally unique is the range of imported pottery. The results of the excavation are recorded in detail in chapters commenting on the architecture, the palace's painted mural decoration, and on other finds representing a wide range of activities, including the likely production of purple dye, valued for trade amongst the elite. Well stratified deposits provide a unique opportunity to establish local ceramic developments and to use them to date events that are being considered in terms of sociopolitical and economic perspectives encompassing the Mediterranean and the Near East. This book, which completes a survey of more than six hundred years of history, will prove especially useful to specialists in the Minoan era and to all students of the ancient world. Daidalos at Work Clair Palyvou, 2018-12-31. This is primarily a book on architecture, and as such it seeks to bring forward the deeper forces that guide the work of all the sons and all the daughters of Daidalos. Architecture is the protagonist, whereas the prehistoric time of this architecture is as important as any other historical time. This book is firmly based on the realities of a long silenced world available to us today through the agency of archaeology. In that sense it addresses archaeologists, architectural historians, and architects alike in the hope that it will prove useful to those interested in understanding the Minoan world through its architecture, as much as those interested in exploring architecture through the Minoan paradigm. This dual goal emanates from my deep belief in the timeless and universal values of architecture. As a teacher of history of architecture, the challenge has been to bring history into the studios where future architecture is formulated, to engage history in the discourse on current architectural ethos and practices, and to show that an analytical and critical approach to the past is a potent tool for advancing architectural awareness and educating future architects. I am equally confident that such an approach will return its benefits back to history, for it will provide new tools of thought and methods of interpretation of the relics of the past. Having set the scope of this book, it is only fair to add what is not included in its goals: the reader will not find a descriptive account of Minoan buildings and sites, nor a list of the major architectural achievements in chronological order. This is due not only to the enormous amount of relevant information that has been accumulated to date, but also to an altogether different interest in the subject, as described above. Time, however, is crucial. We have a mental need to grasp that we are rooted in the continuity of time, and in the man-made world, it is the task of architecture to facilitate this experience. Pallasmaa 2005b: 32. Time-related issues, therefore, such as permanence and change, or tradition and innovation, will concern us. The Minoan World Arthur Cotterell, 1979.
