Christian groups on campus organized “Prayer for Baltimore,” a non-denominational prayer event, held Tuesday on the Keyser Quad. The gathering united people from the University community during a time of chaos in the city. Approximately 200 week to protest the death of Freddie Gray, who died on April 19 from a spinal cord injury after his arrest a week earlier. While the protests have largely remained peaceful, pockets of violence erupted on Saturday evening, and by Monday night, riots caused the University to order students on Homewood Campus to remain indoors.

In an email to the University community Tuesday night, President Ronald J. Daniels condemned the violence as inexcusable and joined those across the city who are seeking answers to the circumstances surrounding Gray’s death.

“We join those who are endorsing the urgency of a full and independent investigation of the circumstances surrounding Mr. Gray’s death,” he wrote. “It is essential that all of our city’s citizens have trust and confidence in

Hundreds march in campus rally

Hopkins students called for justice for Freddie Gray at a student-led protest on Wednesday afternoon.

The group gathered in front of the Beach and walked down N. Charles Street to Penn Station, where they joined other college and high school students from across the city.

The Homewood protest was organized by the Black Student Union (BSU) and Hopkins Feminists.

Protesters held up posters that said “Hopkins Cares” and “Am I Next?” and chanting, “All night, all day, we will fight for Freddie Gray.” Many of the students wore shirts that said “Black Lives Matter,” and many others wore black clothing.

Students marched from the Beach to Gilman Hall and protested on the front steps before looping back to N. Charles Street to proceed to Penn Station, then City Hall.

They joined students from Goucher College, Towson University and other local schools to protest downtown.

Despite initial concerns over the protesters’ safety, the organizers — Tierra Langley, Miaene Kamegna, Enya Baez-Fernandez and Hilario Dominguez — continued with the protest, which was accompanied by police escorts.

According to Langley, the purpose of the protest was to take a stand for Baltimore and all those affected by police brutality, legal sanctions and the marginalization of minority communities.

“We understand not just because we are made up of a lot of minority groups, but because a lot of us come from communities that have been overly policed, stigmatized, and stereotyped,” Langley said.

Students respond to city-wide turmoil

By ARRY BEESMAN
News & Features Editor

Emotions erupted on campus after the death of Freddie Gray on April 19. Students praised the peaceful protests throughout Baltimore and condemned the violence that followed.

Rioters looted and burned stores, set police cars on fire and threw rocks and bottles at police officers. Hundreds have been arrested since Sunday.

The severity of the violence was not expected because of the peaceful nature of last week’s protests.

Hopkins students have largely supported nonviolent demonstrations, and many participated in a city-wide student protest on Wednesday.

Janice Bonta, the current executive president of the Student Government Association (SGA), participated in Wednesday’s protest that began on the Homewood Campus.

She shared her opinions on the riots and protests in Baltimore.

“What happened these past few days was the product of oppression that started a long time before our time. The violence hurt all of us in a way that we never thought was possible, and though we all come from all over the country and the world, we were all united as one Baltimore and will
