Rural Development In China:

Rural Development in China Xiaotong Fei, 1989-06-13 This collection of essays written from 1947-1986 by Fei Hsiao-tung, China's most distinguished sociologist and anthropologist, presents a rich and representative sampling of the research that has characterized his long career. In 1936, Fei conducted field work in Kaixian, a village in Jiangsu province in east China. This village became the subject of his now classic study Peasant Life in China, in which he argued that because of China's huge population and the scarcity of cultivable land, household industries such as production of raw silk were vital to the peasants' economic survival. His conclusions, long rejected by China's policymakers, have recently been embraced by the government under the political leadership of Deng Xiaoping. Returning to Kaixian in 1957 and again in the 1980s, Fei examined the changes that had occurred since his initial research. Three essays that resulted from these follow-up studies are included in this collection, providing a rare summary and analysis of developments in the village between 1936 and 1986. Also included here are four articles based on Fei's 1983-84 research in other areas of Jiangsu province. His explorations of the contrast between the wealth of southern Jiangsu and the long-standing poverty of the northern half of the province address key issues of public policy in China today. Useful to students of rural sociology as well as of Chinese history, politics, economics, and anthropology, this collection will provide an overview not only of developments in the small towns of China but also of Fei's thought.

Women and Rural Development in China Elisabeth Croll, 1985 How far will the current reforms in the Chinese countryside improve the position of peasant women? In this timely analysis, Elisabeth Croll examines China's new rural policies which have boosted agricultural production and radically altered its organization. The inclusion in one book of an up-to-date analysis of rural developments in China and a detailed examination of the effects of rural development policies on women's production and reproduction between 1949 and 1978 provides the reader with a unique opportunity to study the implications of the collectivization and decollectivization of agriculture.

The greatest challenge facing China today is to curb the growing economic divide between urban and rural people. Achieving this requires that the rural economy in general and rural industries in particular transform rapid growth into sustained development. However, policy makers are struggling to modernise rural industries such as the cattle and beef industry, especially in a way that contributes to rural incomes. This book provides a systematic, detailed, and up-to-date analysis of how institutional and policy reforms impact on rural and industry development in China. Academics, policy makers, and others will find that this case study offers new insights into China's rural economy, institutional change, and transition process.
