Addressing Inequality in South Asia The World Bank, 2014-10-08 Inequality in South Asia appears to be moderate when looking at standard indicators such as the Gini index which are based on consumption expenditures per capita But other pieces of evidence reveal enormous gaps from extravagant wealth at one end to lack of access to the most basic services at the other Which prompts the question How bad is inequality in South Asia And why would that matter This book takes a comprehensive look at the extent nature and drivers of inequality in this very dynamic region of the world It discusses how some dimensions of inequality such as high returns to investments in human capital contribute to economic growth while others such as high payoffs to rent seeking or broken aspirations undermine it Drawing upon a variety of data sources it disentangles the contribution that opportunity in young age mobility in adult years and support throughout life make to inequality at any point in time Equally important the book sheds light on the prospects of escaping disadvantage over time The analysis shows that South Asia performs poorly in terms of opportunity Access to basic services is partial at best and can be traced to characteristics at birth including gender location and caste Conversely the region has had a robust performance in terms of geographical and occupational mobility despite its cluttered urbanization and widespread informality Migration and jobs have served disadvantaged groups better than the rest highlighting the importance of the urbanization and private sector development agendas Support falls somewhere in between Poverty alleviation programs are pervasive But the mobilization of public resources is limited and much of it is wasted in regressive subsidies while inter government transfers do not do enough to mitigate spatial inequalities Combating

PROGRAMMES ON SOCIAL TRANSFORMATION AMONG SCHEDULED CASTES Dr. H.T. Thippeswamy,2015-09-10 Scheduled castes are those castes races which have been or may in future be specified in a list in accordance with Article 341 of our Constitution The people of these castes are considered outcastes and categorized as untouchables They remain at the bottom of social hierarchy and have been socially deprived discriminated and exploited by the upper castes since time immemorial This is the result of our rigid caste system which divides the Indian society into upper castes and lower castes on the basis of birth Mythologically the people of these castes are born impure culturally they suffer from social disabilities and occupationally they are linked with impure occupation and above all they are exclusively dependent for their survival on the higher castes of the respective villages who have tradition bound attitudes reflected in the nomenclature castes etc

Poverty and Development Planning in India K.L. Datta,2014-01-01 This book covers a wide range of issues related to poverty and inequality in the context of development planning in India. It presents an account of the planning and development strategy at the backdrop of the measures to effect poverty reduction. It describes India's planning process and analyses the mathematical models of growth and investment which are at the back of Plan formulation and provides an account of the measures of poverty reduction. The centrality of this analysis is the transition from growth measures pursued until the 1970s to a mix of growth and redistribution since the 1980s and then to inclusive growth. This book covers four core areas. First, the treatise on mathematical models to chart out a growth path, the manner and method of using poverty as a parameter in the consistency type growth models and the analytical details of the changes in the planning strategy during the period of economic reforms contained here give seminal insights into the role of planning in poverty reduction. Second, it comments on the methodology of the measurement of poverty comprehensively summarising the debates surrounding it. Third, the identification of poor and accrual to their income through direct attack on poverty has been chronicled with a critique's eye. Here, a clinical examination of the specific strategies and their outcomes with a quantitative analysis of the general growth process and the income redistributive anti-poverty programmes is also done. Fourth, it undertakes a disaggregated quantification of poverty at the regional level in rural and urban areas and by social and occupation groups. These reflect the stratified nature of Indian society and are integral to the formulation of a meaningful plan for poverty reduction. The issues addressed here are essential to understand poverty and inequality in India's rapidly growing economy. Many of them are contentious and have been dealt with academic rigour so as to enable a fair assessment.
