Our Time is Now Julie Gibbings, 2020-06-18 Postcolonial histories have long emphasized the darker side of narratives of historical progress especially their role in underwriting global and racial hierarchies Concepts like primitiveness backwardness and underdevelopment not only racialized and gendered peoples and regions but also ranked them on a seemingly naturalized timeline their present is our past and reframed the politics of capitalist expansion and colonization as an orderly natural process of evolution towards modernity Our Time is Now reveals that modernity particularly appealed to those excluded from power precisely because of its aspirational and future orientation In the process marginalized peoples creatively imagined diverse political futures that redefined the racialized and temporal terms of modernity Employing a critical reading of a wide variety of previously untapped sources Julie Gibbings demonstrates how the struggle between indigenous people and settlers to manage contested ideas of time and history as well as practices of modern politics economics and social norms were central to the rise of coffee capitalism in Guatemala and to twentieth century populist dictatorship and revolution
