Dubé, Franz Schmithüsen, 2007-01-01 This book containing 31 chapters grouped into two parts provides rich and multi faceted documentation of current progress being made in creating the political economic and social conditions indispensable for sustainable and multi functional use of forest resources and notes the obstacles that needs to be removed to reach this goal The first part chapters 1-9 introduces general and global aspects that have to be considered in the context of cross sectoral policy coordination This include discussions on the impact of external shocks such as a sudden oil price increase on forest management the impact of energy or trade policies on global wood markets and the role of decentralization in integrating multiple demands on forests The second part of the book deals with regional national and local issues of cross sectoral policy linkages The chapters on Africa chapters 10-15 focus largely on the improvement of land management practices such as agroforestry land tenure and gender issues more integrative policies in promoting reforestation and afforestation multiple stakeholder planning processes and external policy impacts in protecting and managing Miombo forests In Asia chapters 16-20 important subjects appearing in several chapters are the need to develop environmental and economic accounts for forestry and to demonstrate more clearly the great importance of non timber forest product linkages road construction and population effects of forest conversion community forest management contributions to the local and national economy and cross sectoral policy links in the development of mountainous areas are other issues addressed In the Europe part chapters 21-24 both environmental problems as well as strong trends towards developing a competitive forest and wood processing sector determine public policy development to a considerable extent This can be seen from leading policy scenarios that have been identified from the changes in perceptions with regard to the forest sector and from the policy issues at national level that are presented A somewhat similar pattern of competing policy demands between resource use industrial expansion and strong environmental demands emerges from the contributions dealing with the Americas chapters 25 31 These chapters contain the experiences of the USA in cross sectoral impact analysis the lessons to be learned from the long and confliction history in managing the national forests as well as from the resource conflicts described between forestry uses oil and gas development and environmental protection in the boreal regions of Canada

Forest management and the impact on water resources García Chevesich, Pablo, Neary, Daniel G., Scott, David F., Benyon, Richard G., Reyna, Teresa, 2017-04-24 Trees have been around for more than 370 million years and today there are about 80 thousand species of them occupying 3 5 billion hectares worldwide including 250 million ha of commercial plantations While forests can provide tremendous environmental social and economic benefits to nations they also affect the hydrologic cycle in different ways As the demand for water grows and local precipitation patterns change due to global warming plantation forestry has encountered an increasing number of water related conflicts worldwide This document provides a country by country summary of the current state of knowledge on the relationship between forest management and water resources Based on available research publications the Editor in Chief of this document contacted local scientists from countries where the impact of forest management on water resources is an issue inviting them to submit a chapter

Ecological Economic and Socio Ecological Strategies for Forest Conservation Felix Fuders, Pablo J. Donoso, 2020-05-13 This book proposes strategies for improving the resilience and conservation of temperate forests in South America such that these forests can provide ecosystem services in a sustainable way As such it contributes to the design of a resilient human forest model that takes into account the multiculturalism of local communities in many cases including aspects of ecological economics development economics and territorial development planning that are related to indigenous peoples or first nations Further it provides proposals for public and territorial policies that improve the state of conservation of native forests and forest ecosystems based on a critical analysis of the economic factors that lead to the degradation of forest ecosystems in South America today This edition was conceived by members of the Transdisciplinary Research Center for Social and Ecological Strategies for Sustainable Forest Management in South America at the Universidad Austral de Chile It includes contributions by distinguished researchers from around the world combining the fields of economics ecology biology anthropology sociology and statistics It is not however simply a collection of works written by authors from different disciplines but rather each chapter is in itself transdisciplinary This approach makes the book a unique contribution to enhancing social managerial and political approaches to forestry management helping to protect forest ecosystem services and make them more sustainable This in turn will benefit local communities and society as a whole by reducing the negative externalities of forestry
