organization into a strategic force leading the strategic customer management process in companies. Traditionally the area of sales management has mainly been treated as a tactical operational topic in the conventional marketing literature simply part of the communications mix within the planned marketing programme. However the emergence of major customers as dominant buyers in many sectors as a result of pressures towards consolidation and enhanced scale of operations is changing the way in which sales issues are addressed in supplier organizations. The growth of new forms of buyer seller relationship based on collaboration and partnering has encouraged organizations to reconsider the sales and account management operation as an important source of competitive differentiation in commoditized markets. Increasingly sales is being perceived as a central part of business strategy and attention given to the challenges in better aligning sales processes with strategy. This has many implications for the design of the sales organization and its management strategy which go far beyond the confines of conventional marketing views.

The Oxford Handbook of Strategic Sales and Sales Management David W. Cravens, Kenneth Le Meunier-FitzHugh, Nigel F. Piercy, 2012-11-22. The Oxford Handbook of Strategic

Sales and Sales Management is an unrivalled overview by leading academics in the field of sales and marketing management. Sales theory is experiencing a renaissance driven by a number of factors including building profitable relationships, creating brand value, strategic customer management, sales and marketing relationships, global selling, and the change from transactional to customer relationship marketing. Escalating sales and selling costs require organisations to be more focused on results and highlight the shifting of resources from marketing to sales. Further, the growth in customer power now requires a strategic sales response and not just a tactical one. The positioning of sales within the organisation, the sales function, and sales management are all discussed. The Handbook is not a general sales management text about managing a sales force but will fill a gap in the existing literature through consolidating the current academic research in the sales area. The Handbook is structured around four key topics. The first section explores the strategic positioning of the sales function within the modern organisation. The second considers sales management and recent developments. The third section examines the sales relationship with the customer and highlights how sales is responding to the modern environment. Finally, the fourth section reviews the internal composition of sales within the organisation. The Handbook will provide a comprehensive introduction to the latest research in sales management and is suitable for academics, professionals, and those taking professional qualifications in sales and marketing.
